The day holds a series of images
Drawn from Allderdice's huge domain,
And flashed past the eyes.
Out of the thousands of images,
The memory only captures a few
And keeps them for future reference.
It is the difference of each person's Collection of images
That makes each person different and distinct . . .
So different from every one else that he can't be called an Allderdician,
Or a Dragon,
Or any other all-encompassing term.
He is only and totally
The Allderdice Individual.

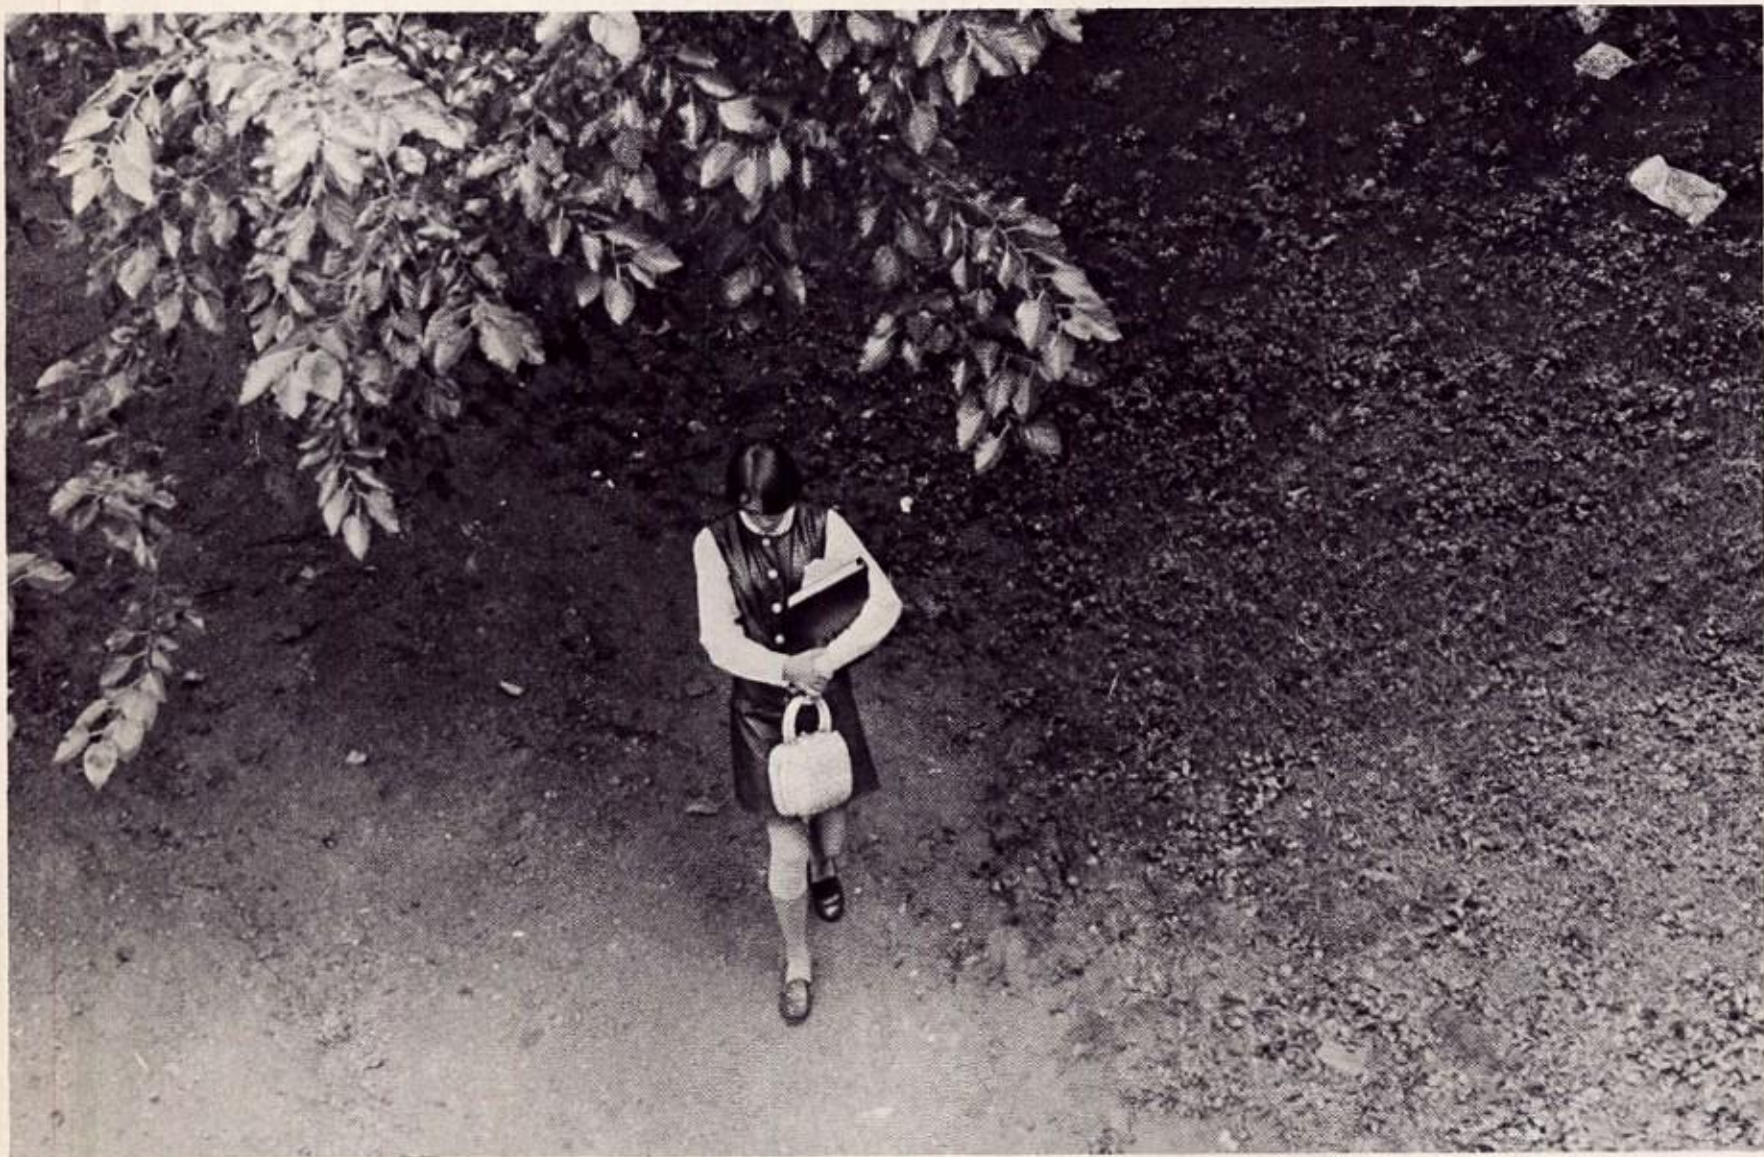

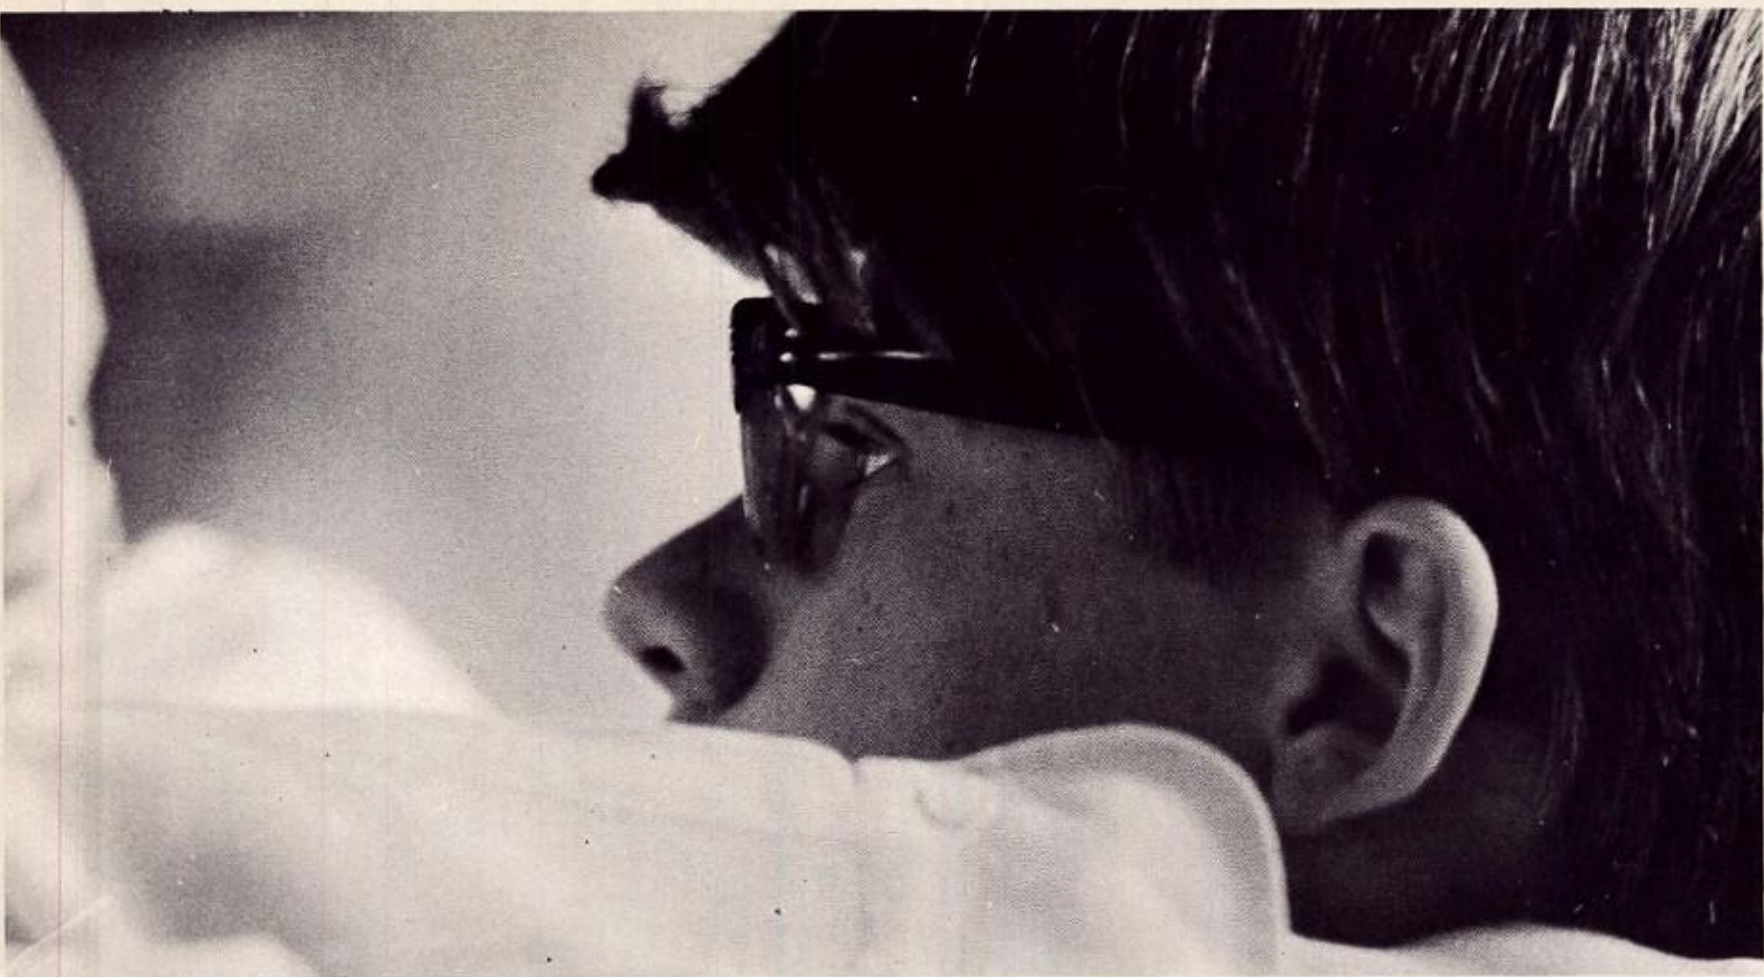

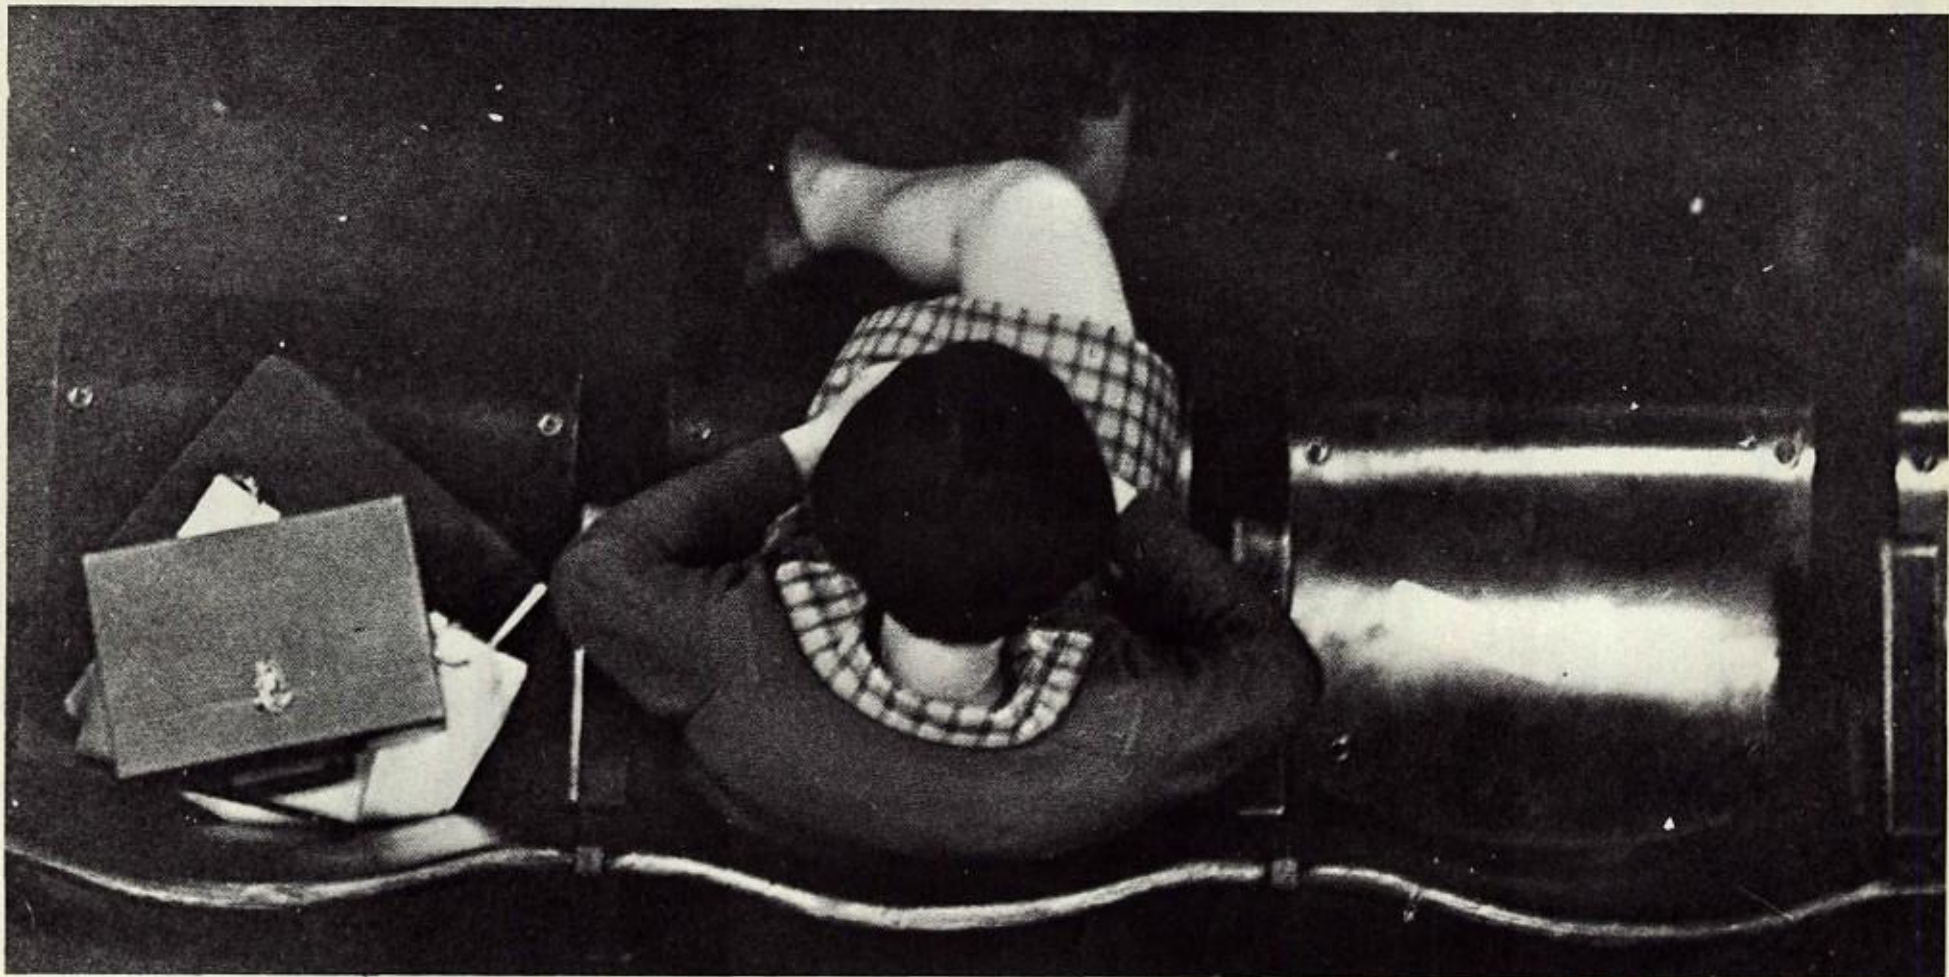

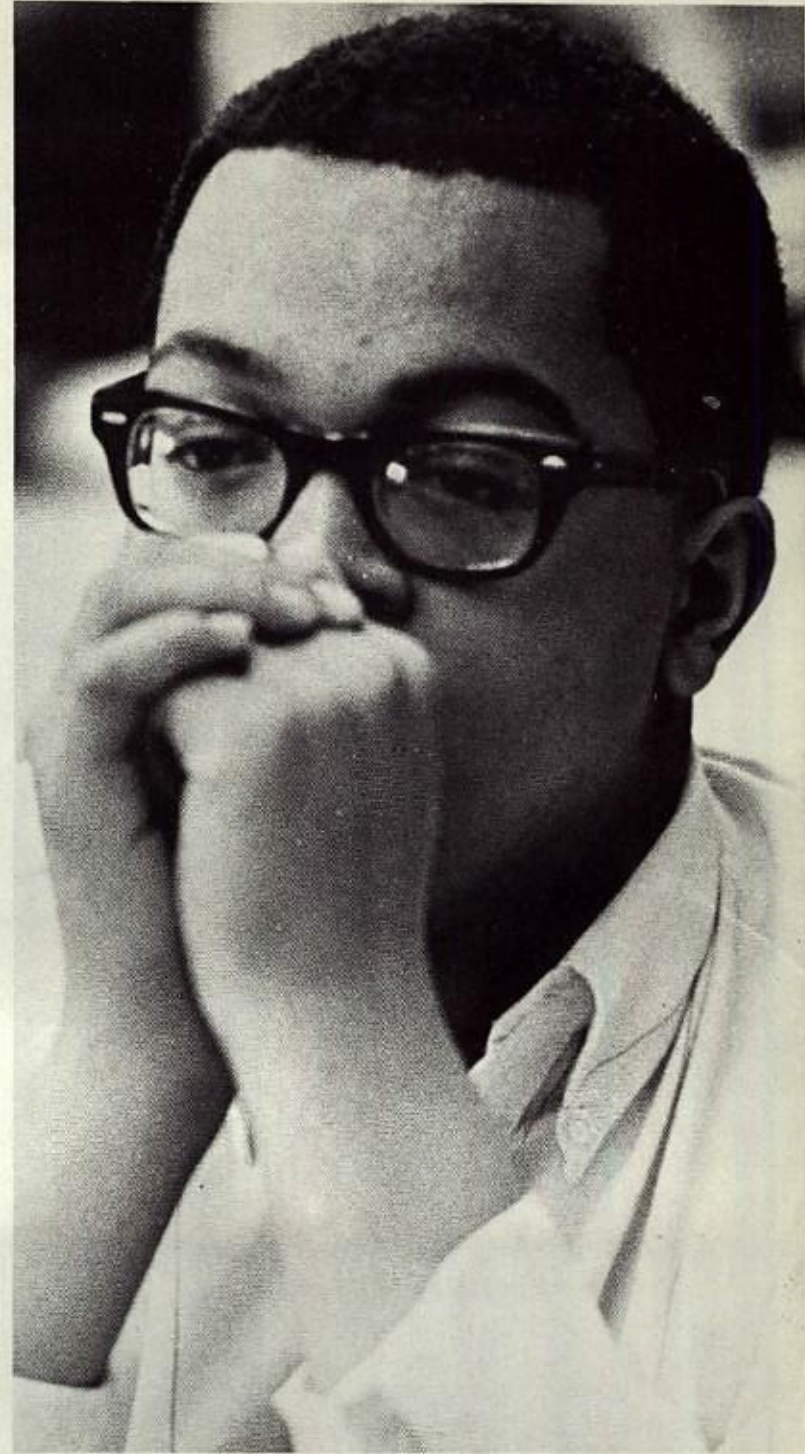

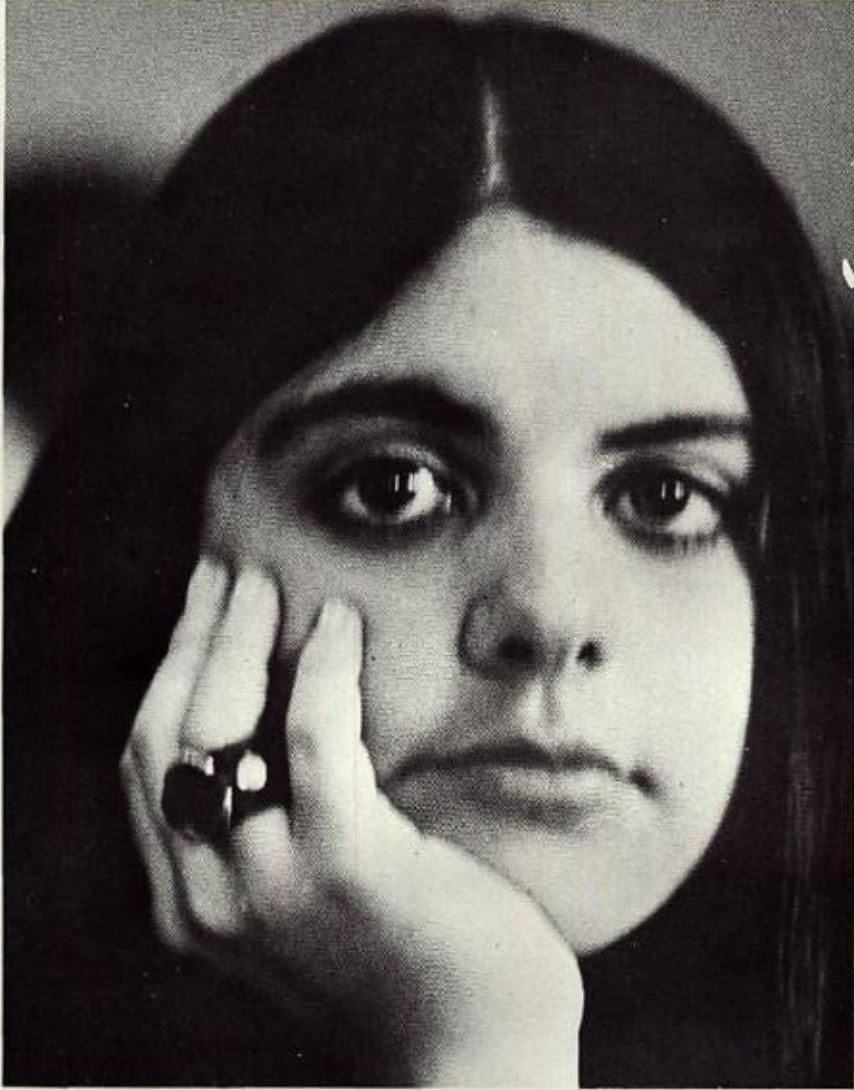

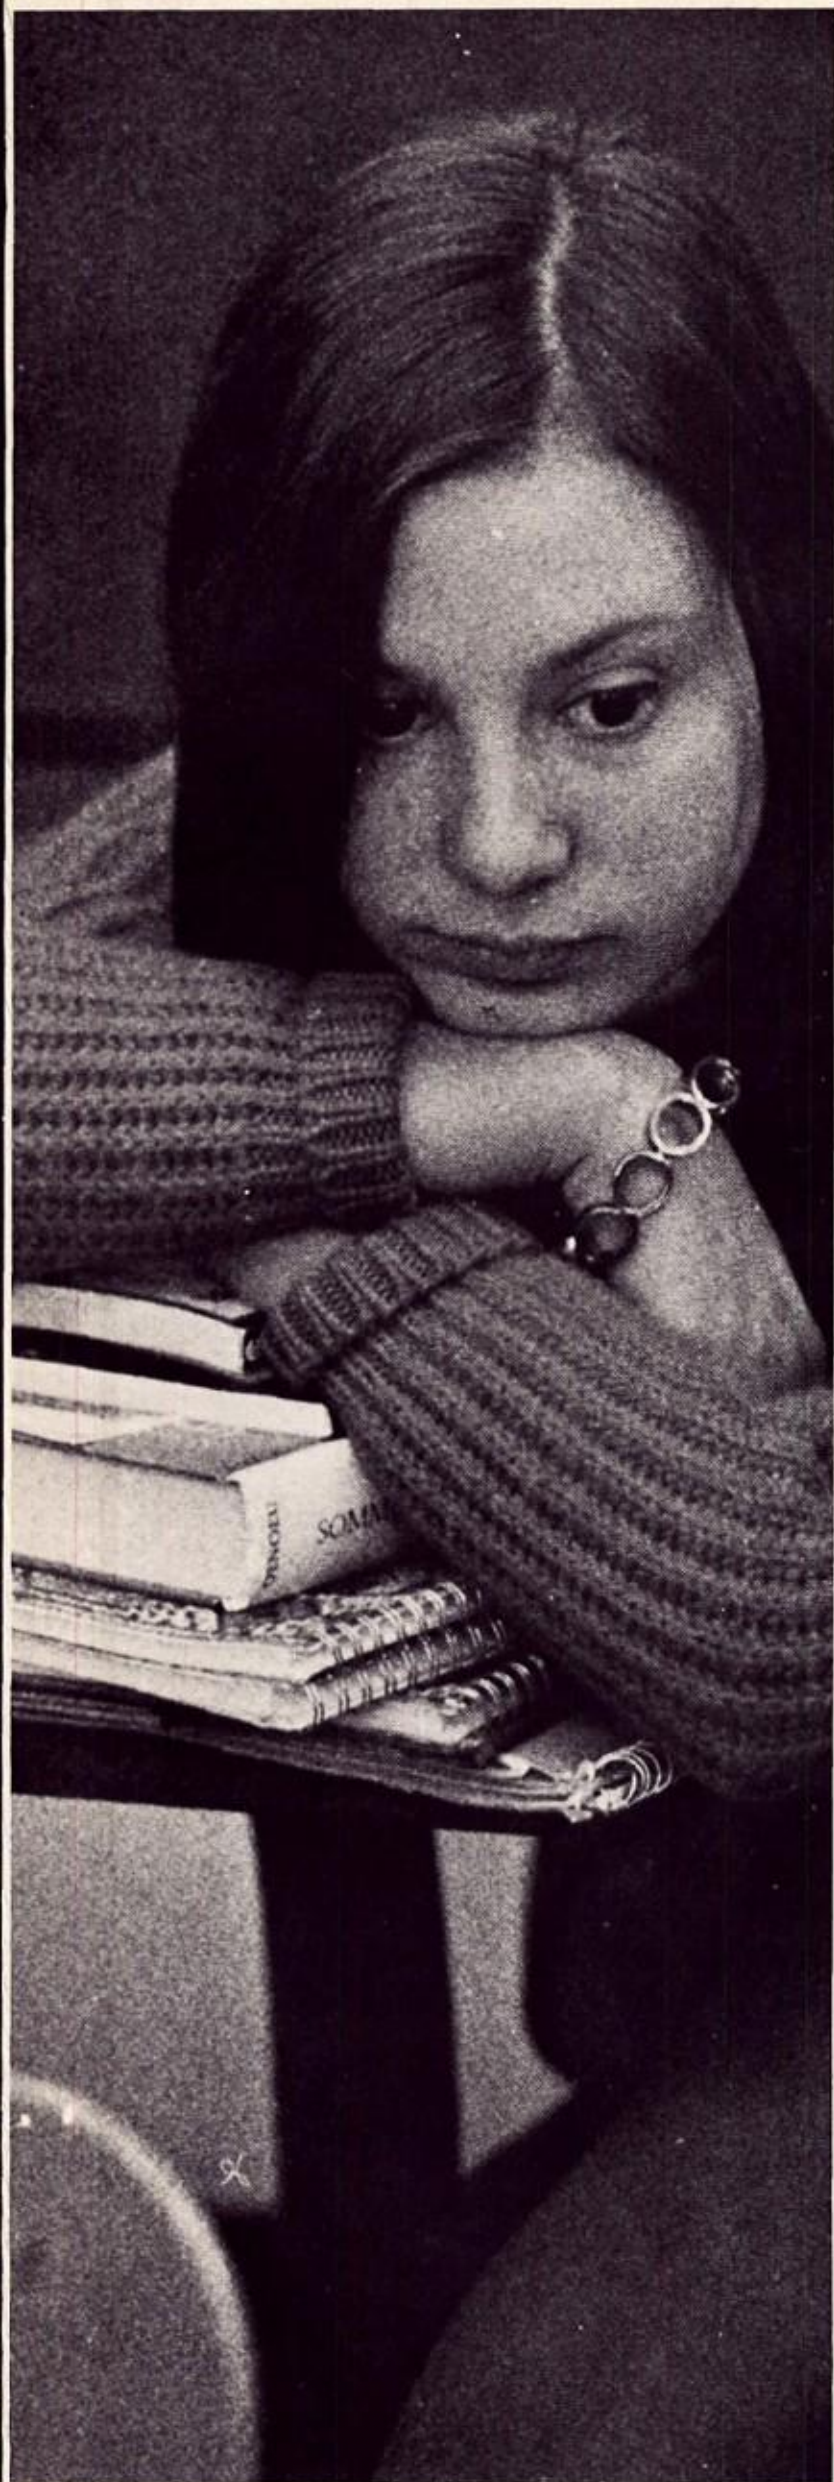

Alone, enveloped in a frozen moment:
 A second in a minute in an hour
 in a day in the life.
 Why is this moment so remembered?
 Tasting a favorite food,
 Basking in a favorite mood,
 Suddenly reaching a long-sought conclusion.
 Revelling in a breathtaking sensation
 Of sight or sound or sibilant breezes.
 A sensation that the pleased mind
 Seizes,
 Freezes.
 It's yours forever.

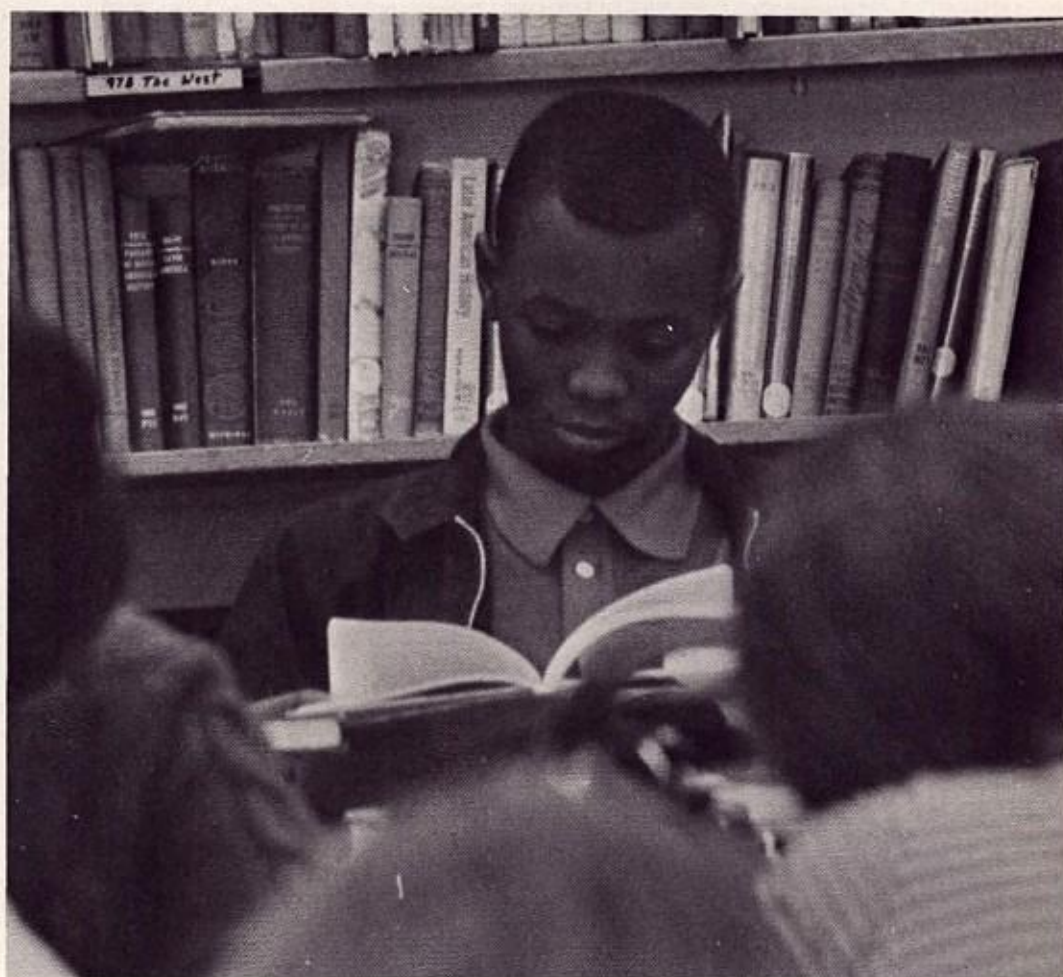

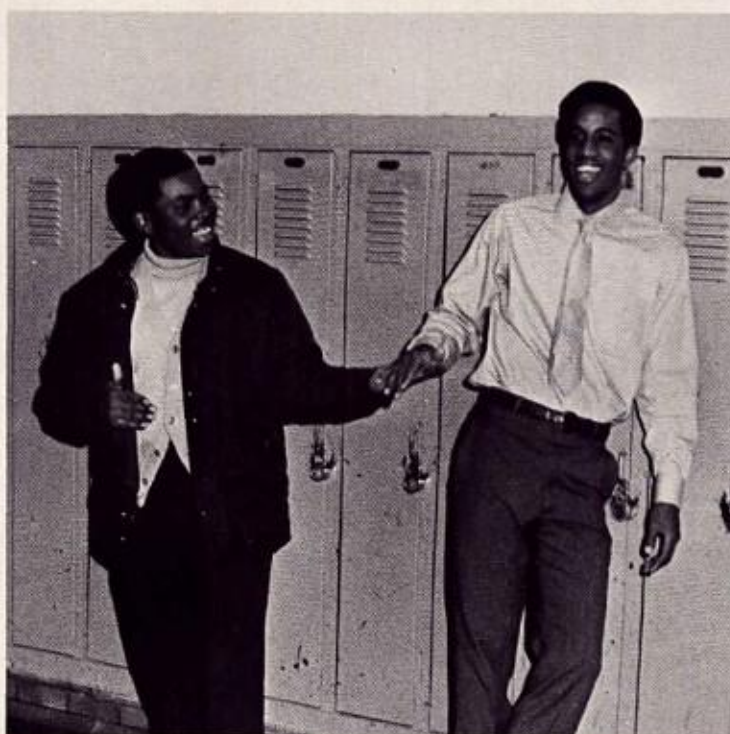

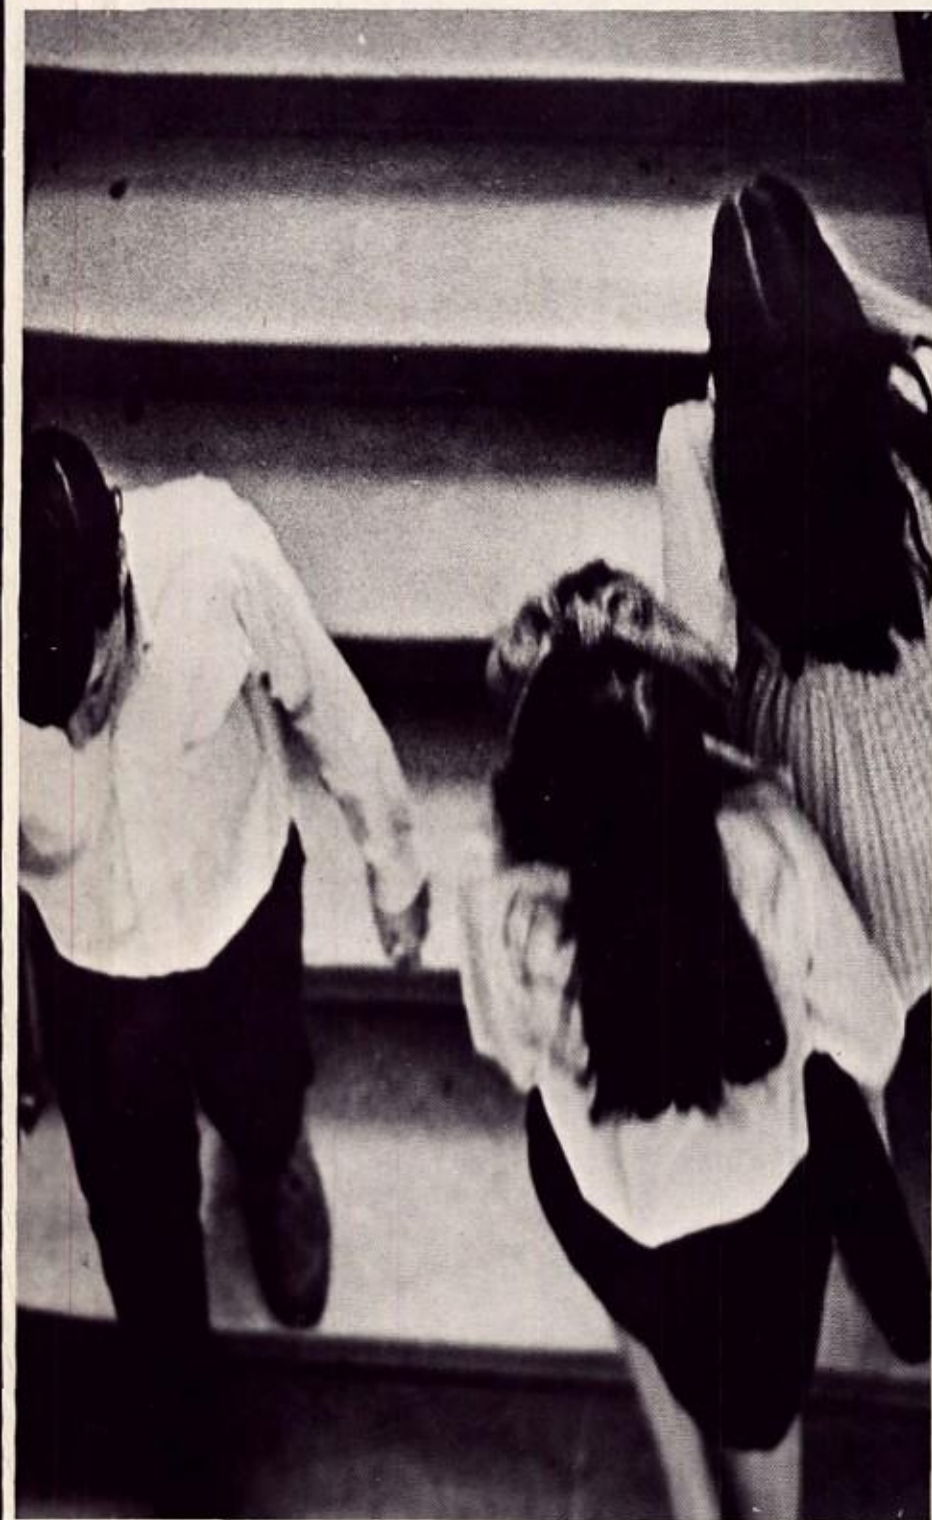

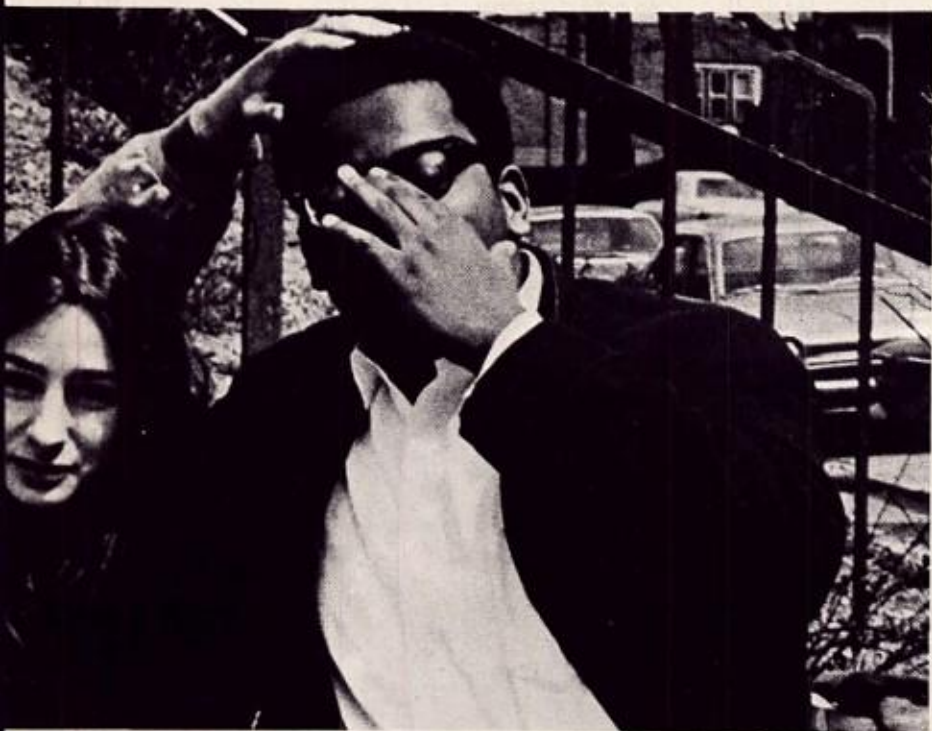

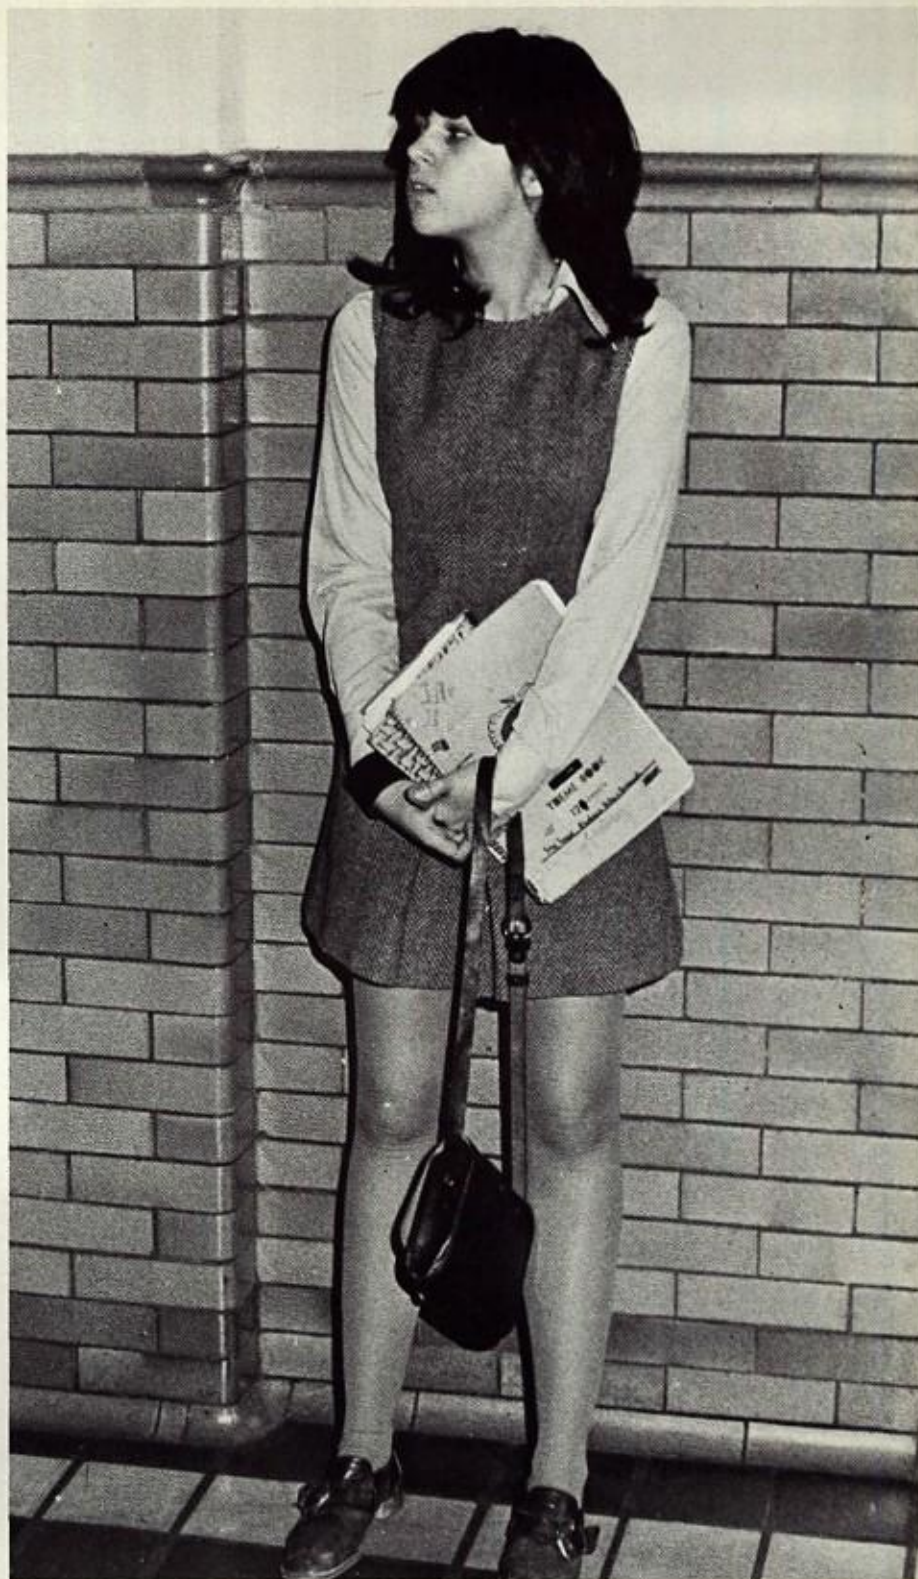

Form your ideas into any shape you want.
 Do you want a dagger that will pierce
 the minds of those who can't see your side?
 Or a brass shield to protect your ideas
 from someone else's dagger?
 Or a soft hand that will welcome others
 to share your thoughts?
 If you aren't yet ready for any shape at all,
 don't hurry.
 Take your time deliberating and pondering.
 The thoughts you form in Allderdice will be with you Always.

Contact!
Continually encountering your peers.
In a river you swim
Darting
From place to place
Meeting, in every whirlpool
People new and old friends
People safely lodged on rafts from which they will never move
And people who like to be free agents
Who won't hang from the rafters
Of a watery attic
And who swim and breathe in currents
Of every color, every belief
Every frequency and texture
Learning how to exist to the fullest.
Allderdice is America in miniature.

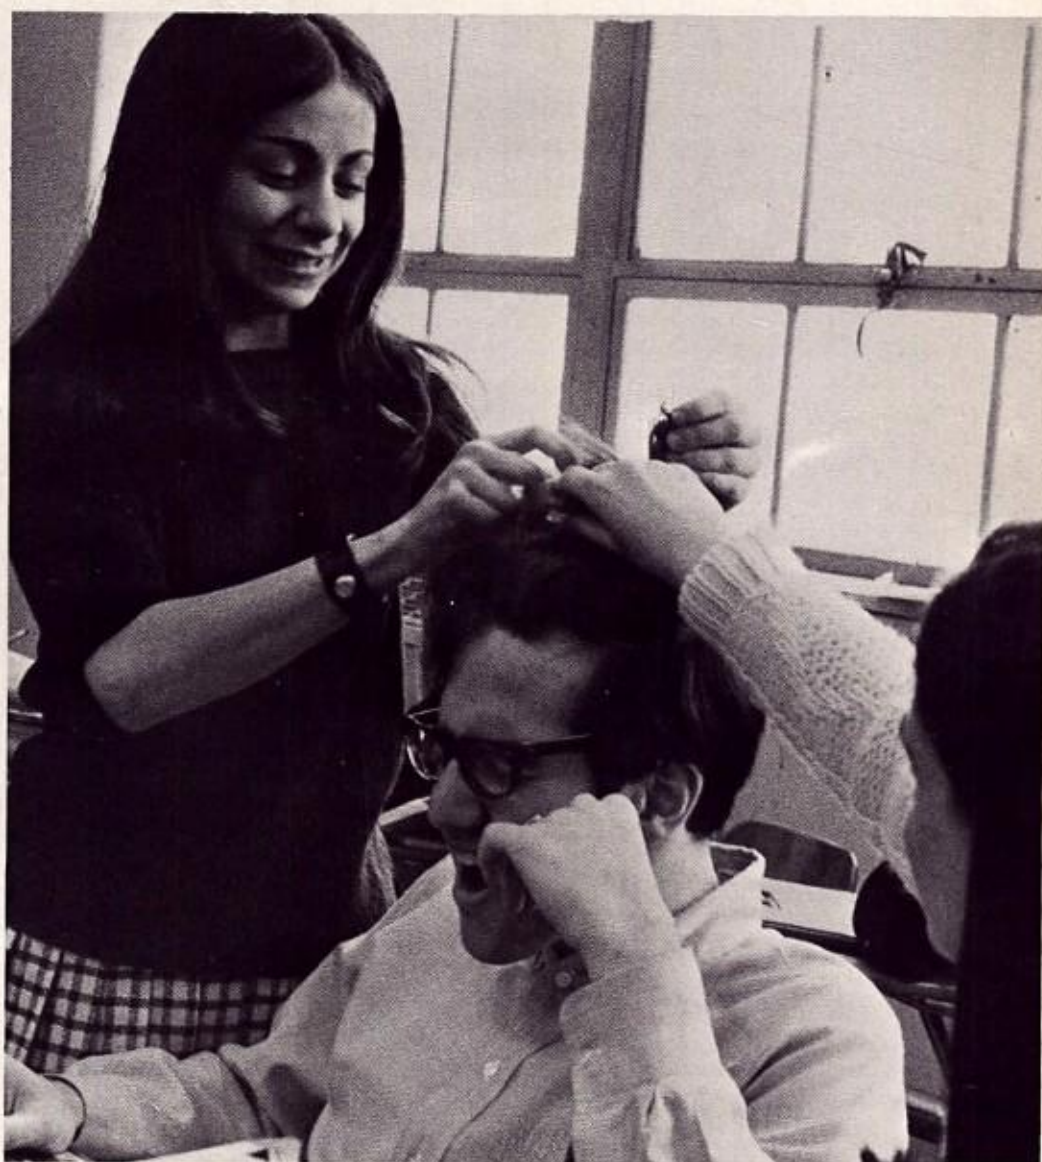

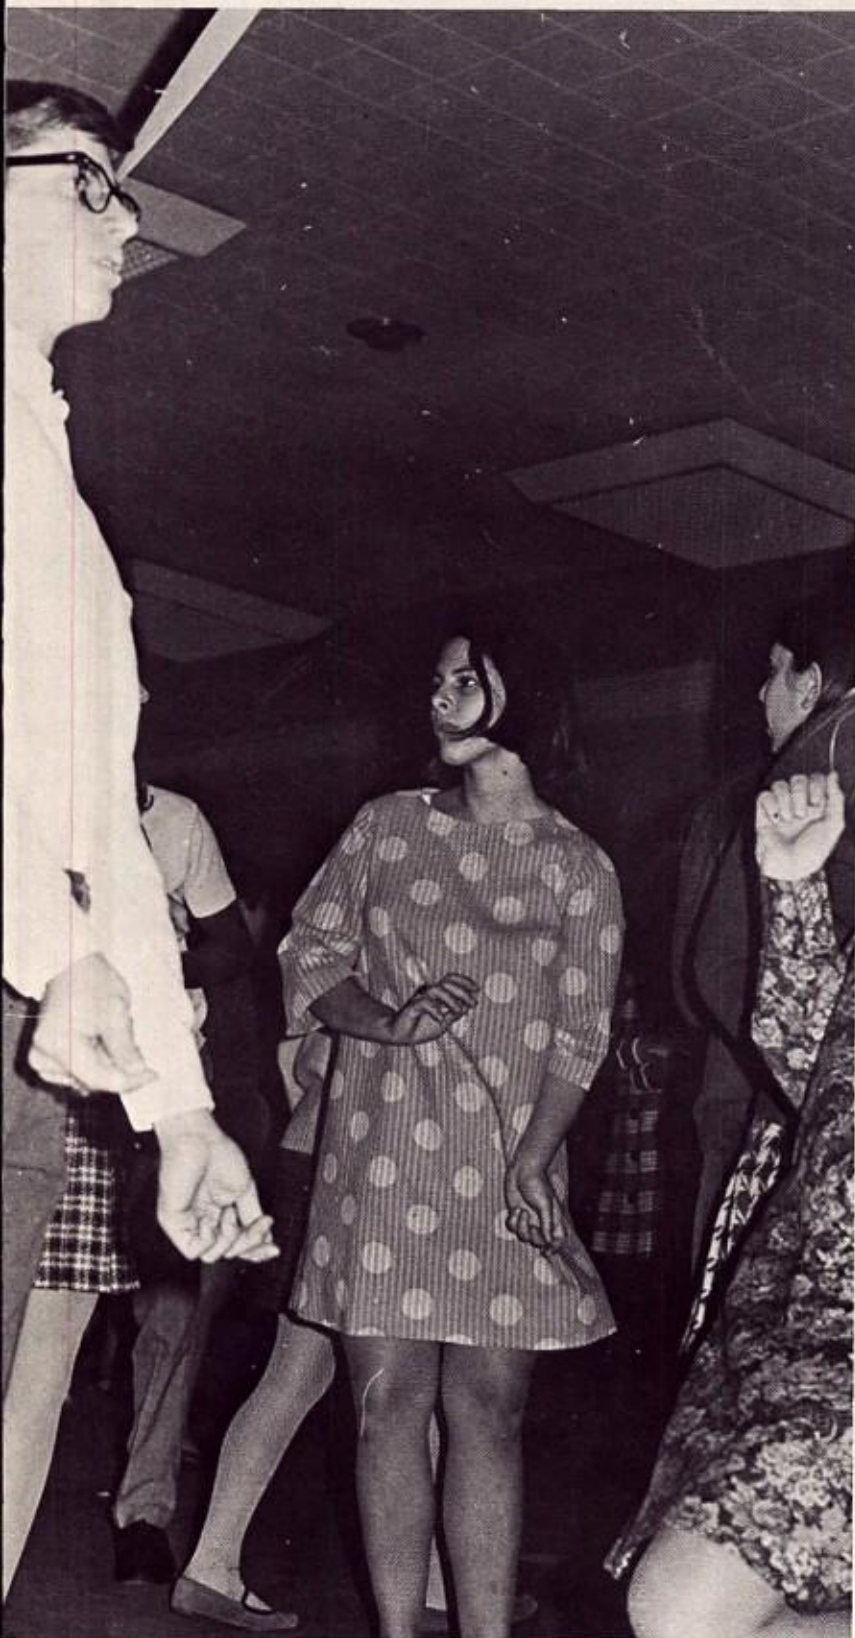

In such changing ways
Position the figures.
Standing indecisively, young
Are you taking the right stand?

One face glimpsed from a cluster of many Puzzling or playful or thoughtful
 But always reflecting
 The shadowy, unclear projection
 Of the next moment.

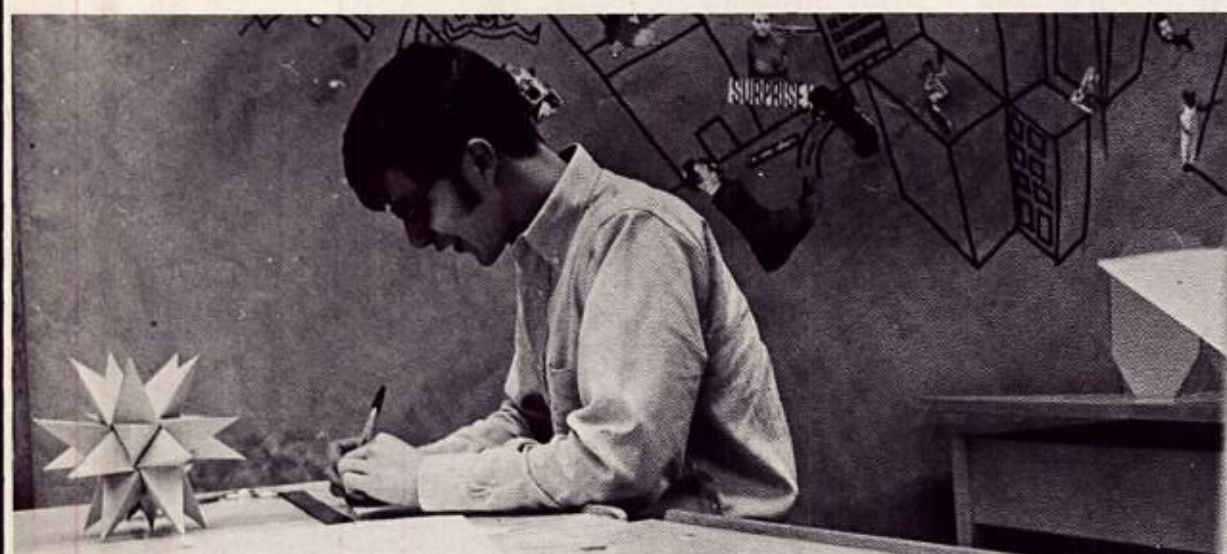

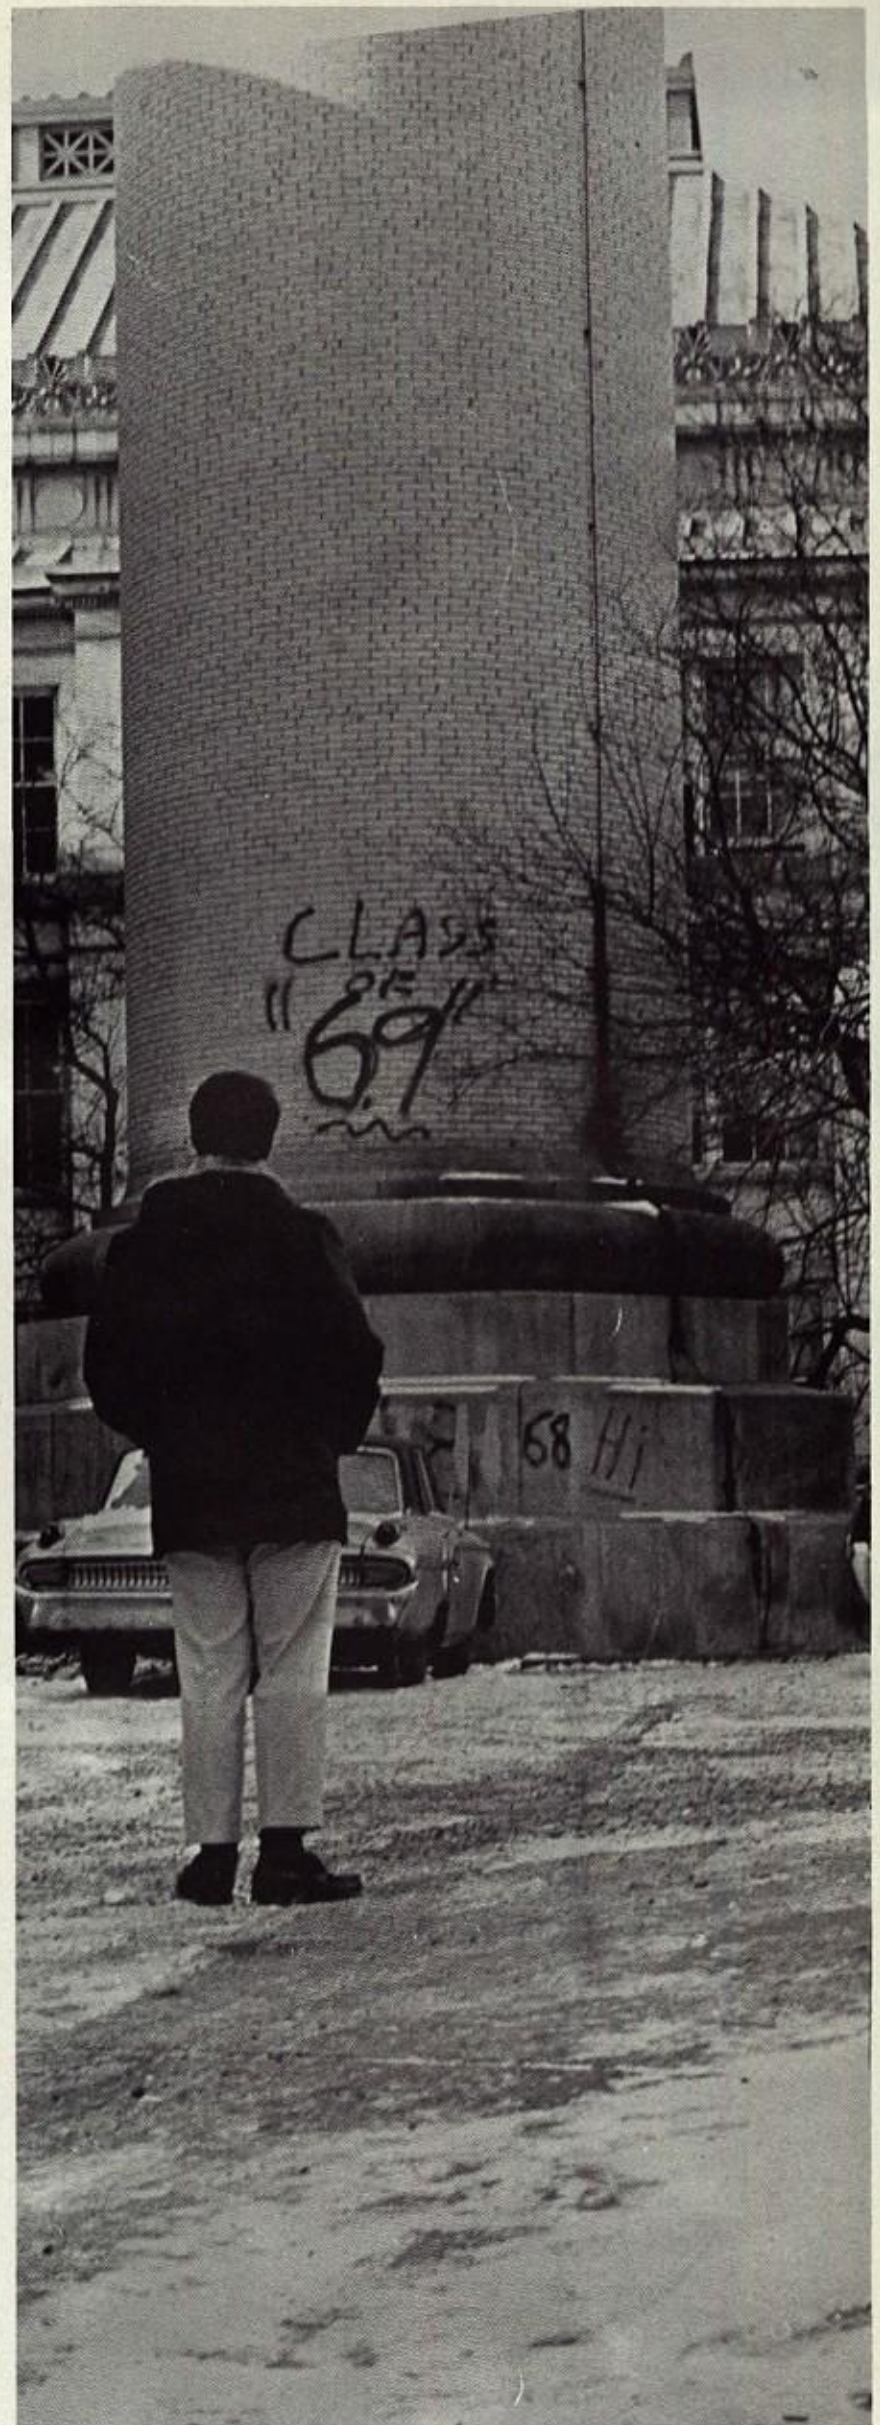

The Allderdice Individual
 Wants not only to study but also to create from what he's learned;
 Not only to be absorbed in self, but absorbed in others;
 Not only to see images, but also to select and make them.

To create a hole
 in the liquid of the crowd
 To stretch an expanse until only you can see its limitations
 Is to be the individual who lives . . .

Seniors '69

NOTE: A second group of senior pictures begins on page 101.

This is our class.

This is our year . . .

Come on down to the Stoned Soul Picnic ...

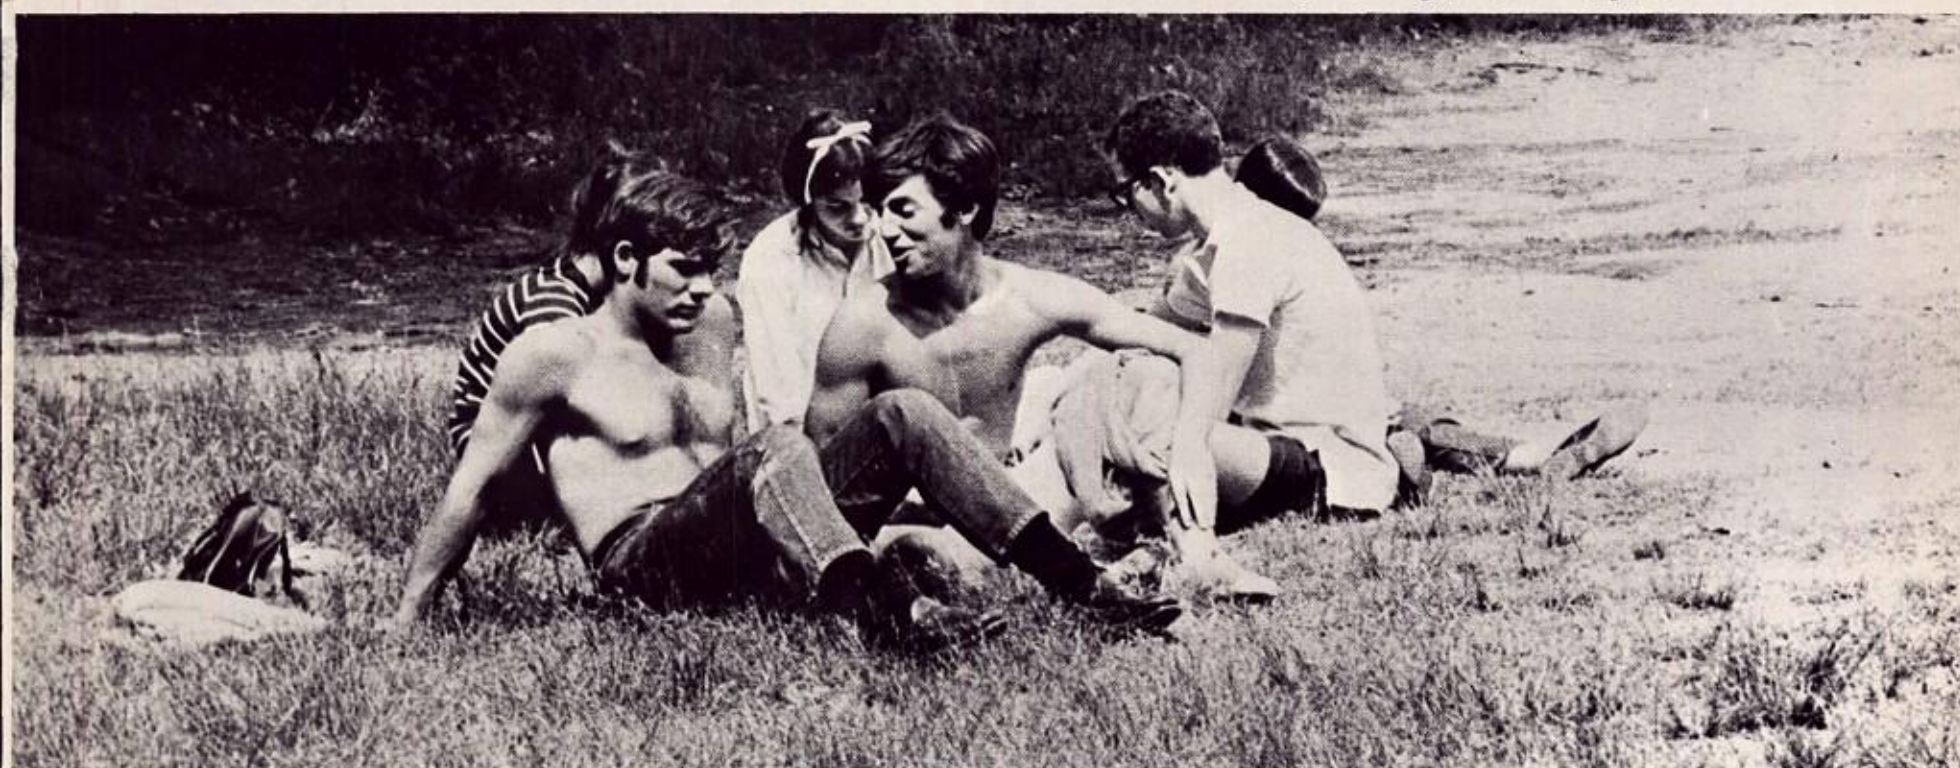

"All right," shouts Mr. Sommerfeld.
"Who's the baddest guy here?"

Junior Class Picnic

Gary Goldberg, leader of the pack.

Wally Ellman—"There are four of us and two of them. Now what?"

Senior Class Affairs

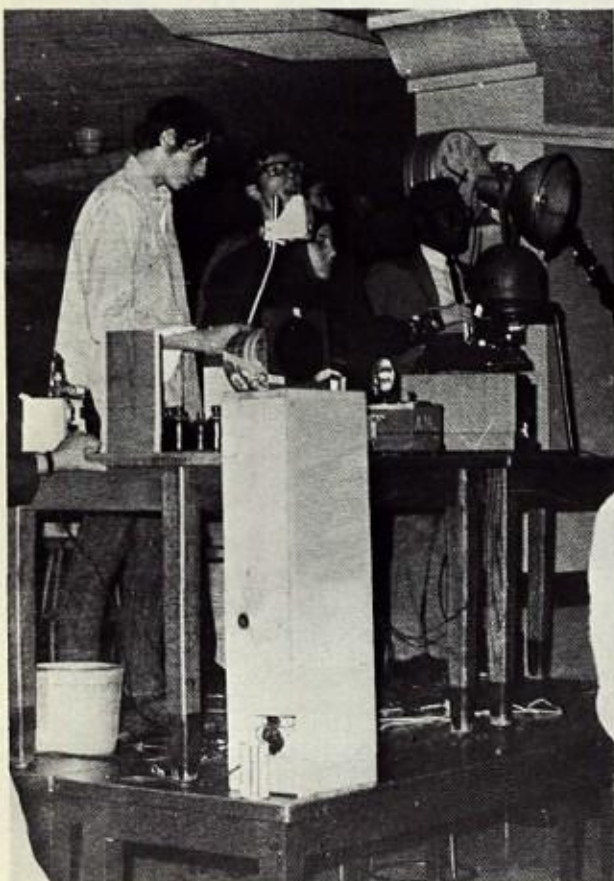

Swing

The Senior Class Concert gave the students their money's worth.

Jay keeps the ball rollin'.

Art Romeo and his mind-blowing light show.

Movin' and groovin' at the computer affair.

The independent sound of the Wellington Organization.

The soul is pouring out all over.

Jay and the Techniques socked it right to you from the TA stage.

The mod Molly Maguires.

Come on ... all together now.

Snow Day 1969

"I can do this pretty well," says Billy Zukerman, "but what happens if this board starts to move."

All that exercise requires nourishment at Snow Day.

Jeff Gerson gives up and heads south for surfing.

"Now you know why Killy won't come near me," shouts Richard Lipscher.

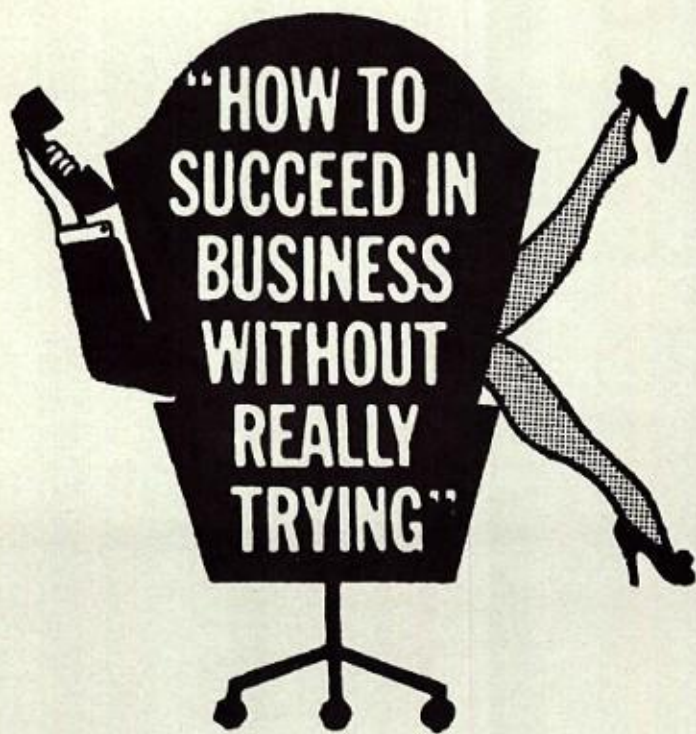

... Susie, Debbie, and Wayne make three.

Gary Finkel and Carol Evans add the international scene to Snow Day.

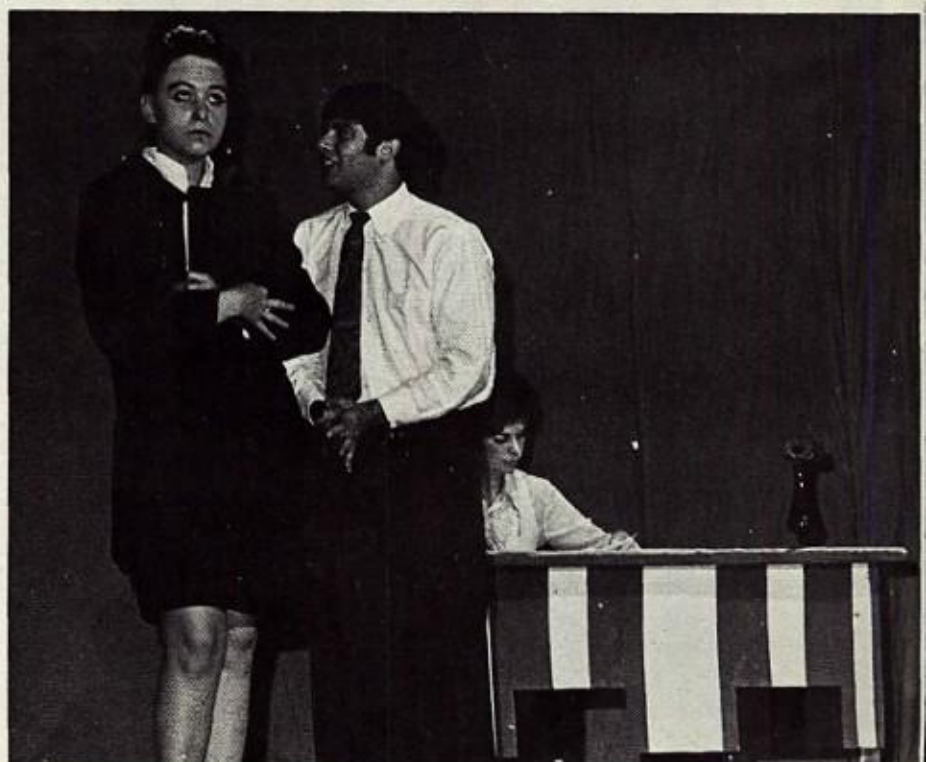

"All right, Bobby," shouts Olivia Loeb, "I told you not to drop my penny in the snow."

Smitty is unaffected by Rosemary's excitement over that fascinating new worldwide wicket worker, Finch.

The big boss, J. B. Biggley, reprimands Finch at their first meeting.

Miss Jones, Mr. Biggley's very impressive secretary, soaks up a little flattery from Finch.

Bud Frump, the boss's ambitious nephew, explodes at Finch's promotion.

Mr. Bratt of Personnel takes a good look at Hedy LaRue's assets.

Finch consults his book for his next step in learning How to Succeed.

Gatch is hard at work, developing new Plans and Systems.

Another couple arrives at the William Penn.

Prom couples mixed talking and dancing into an enjoyable evening.

A warm embrace, a kinship, memories—that's what the prom was all about.

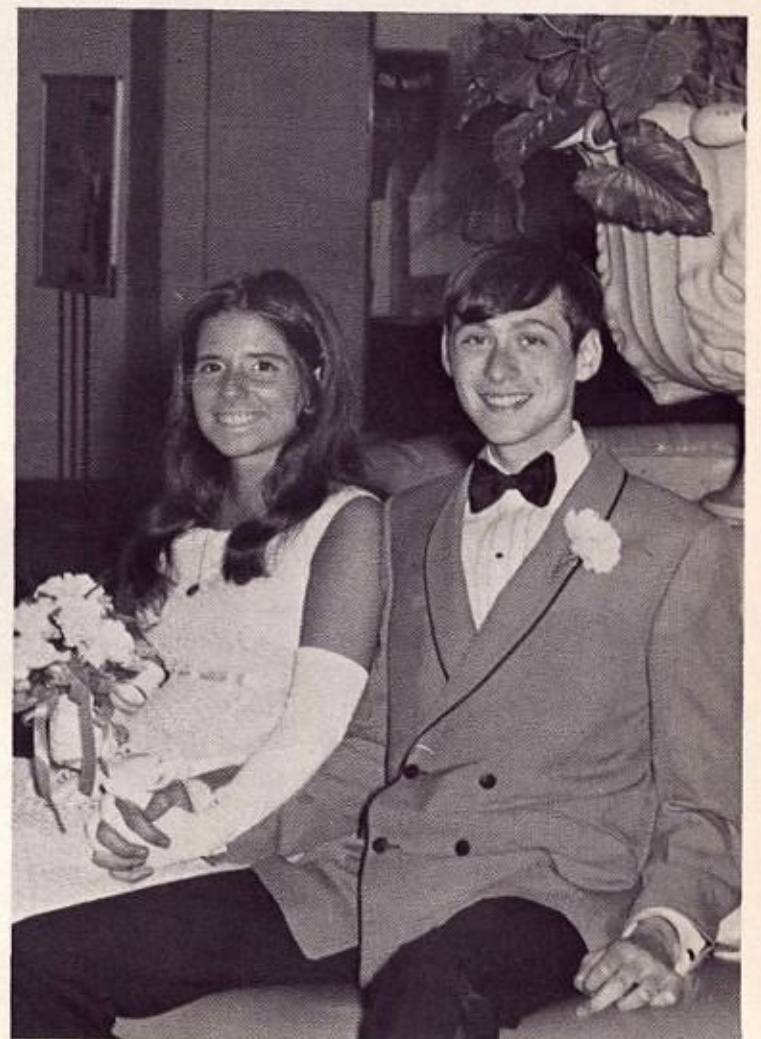

The Prom — June 5, 1969

Prom couples enjoy the music of Walt Harper and his orchestra at the William Penn Hotel.

Thursday, June 5, 1969 finally arrived. The seniors, spirited and quite excited, were getting ready for the prom. Some still rushed about making sure that all the arrangements dealing with refreshments, decorations, and entertainment were in order. Others were awaiting the last minute rush: boys getting nervous about the rented tux that hadn't arrived and girls worrying about the curls that wouldn't flip right. Still others were trying to tuck in a few extra hours of sleep that would be lost by the next morning.

At 9:00 Thursday evening, they were all there, ready to enjoy the long evening ahead at the William Penn. The girls in their long dresses and boys in their tuxes, ready to dance to the music of Walt Harper and His Orchestra. By 12:00 the dance was over, though many of the seniors could have kept on going. They had until 1:30 to recuperate, for then the after-prom began at the Holiday House with dancing and entertainment provided by the Manhattans. The program lasted until 6:00 in the morning, when the sleepy seniors moved out to North Park for the final picnic.

A couple of smiles.

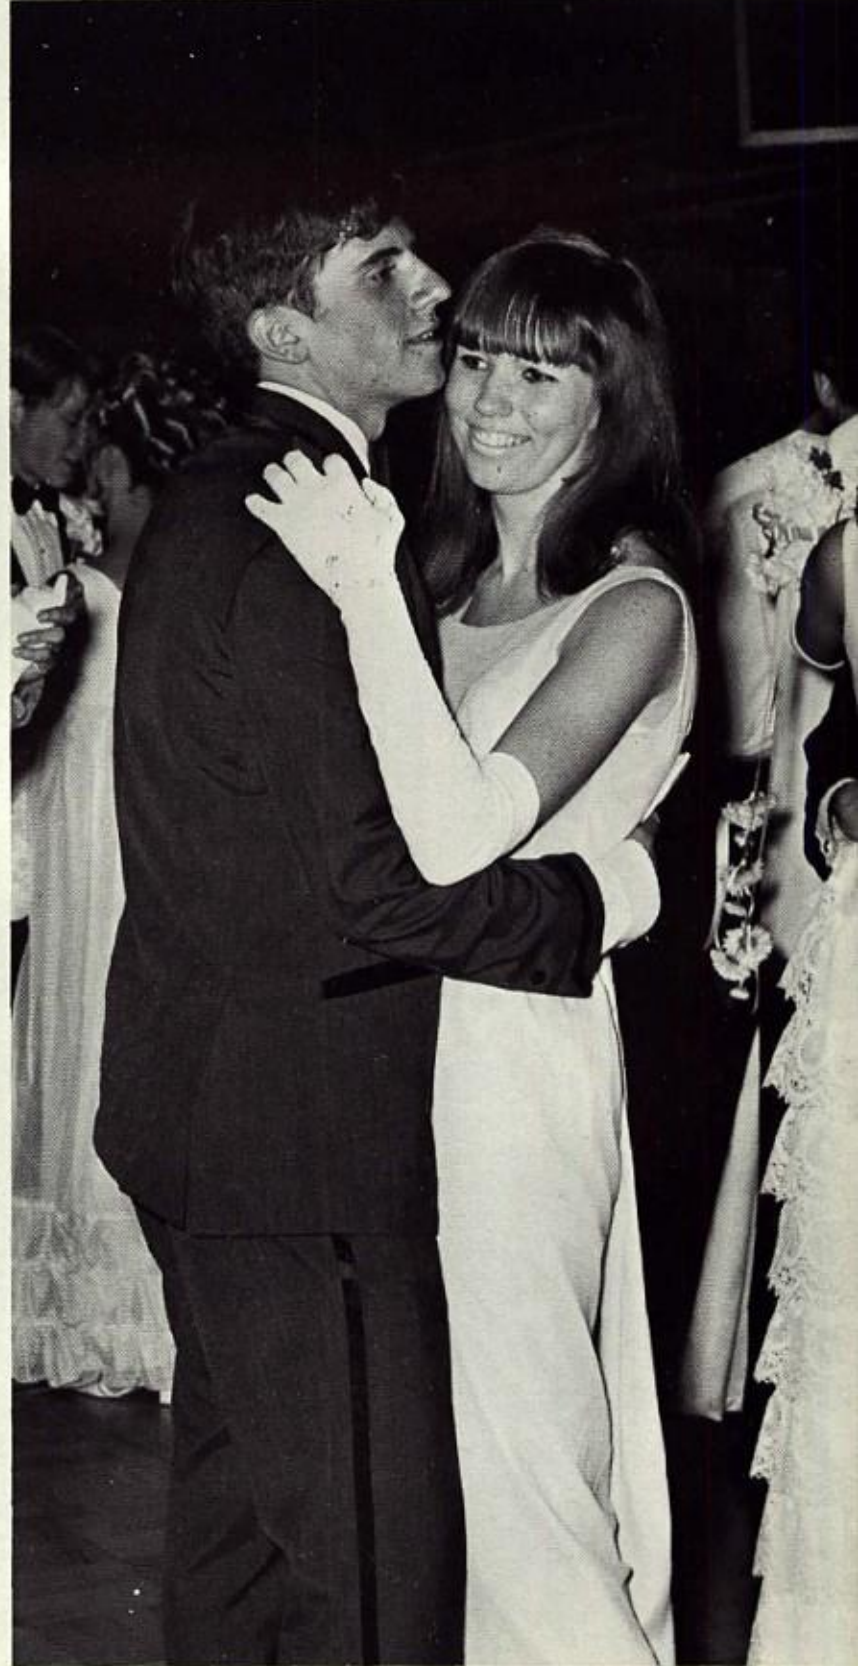

The chaperones didn't bother students at all. They were having fun themselves.

The Prom Queen and her court reigned over the Prom.

Walt Harper and his Orchestra provided the music.

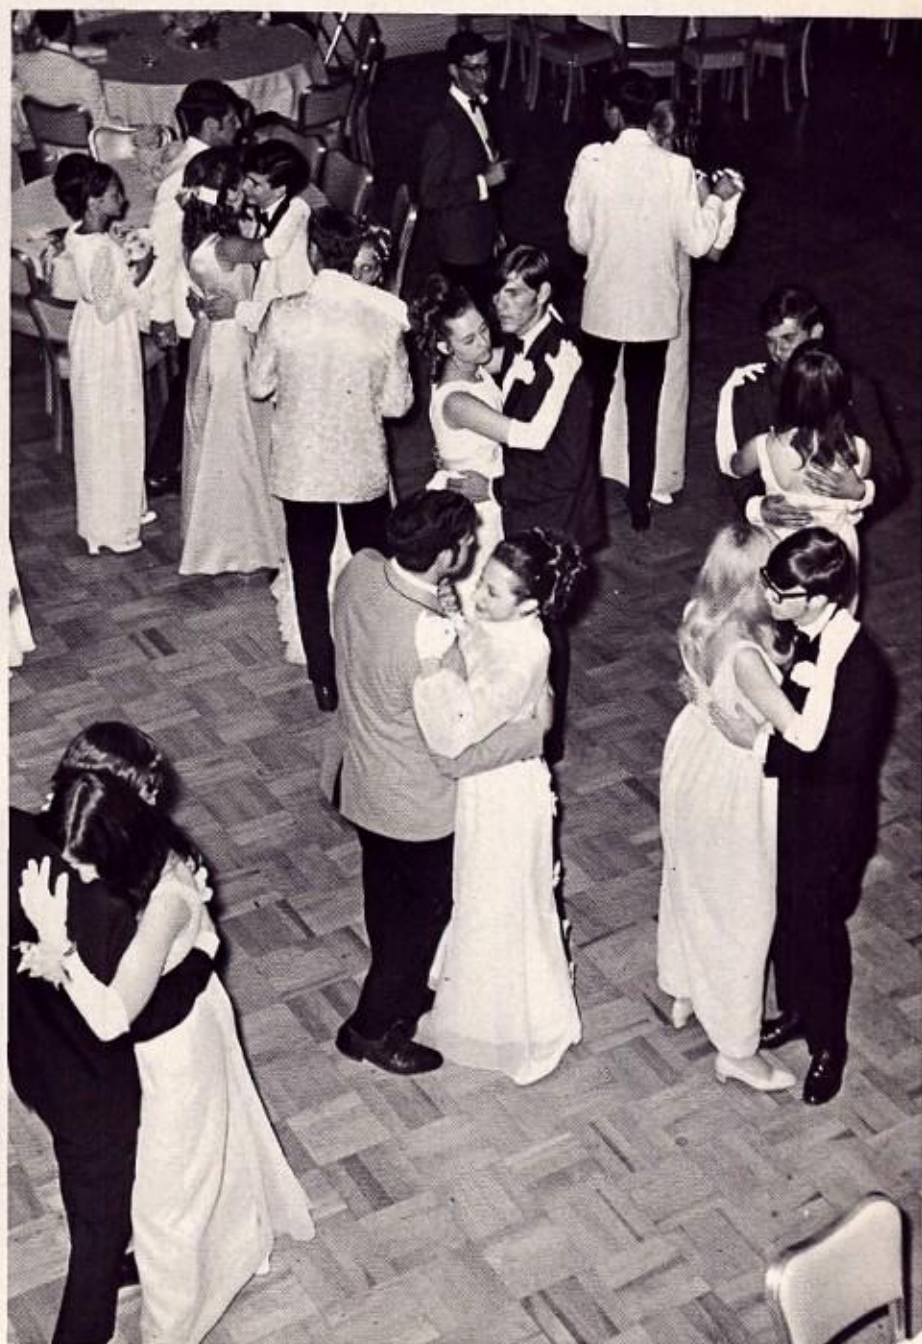

"Just a little bit closer, you're my kind of girl," whispers Mike Zihal to Dolly Gruber.

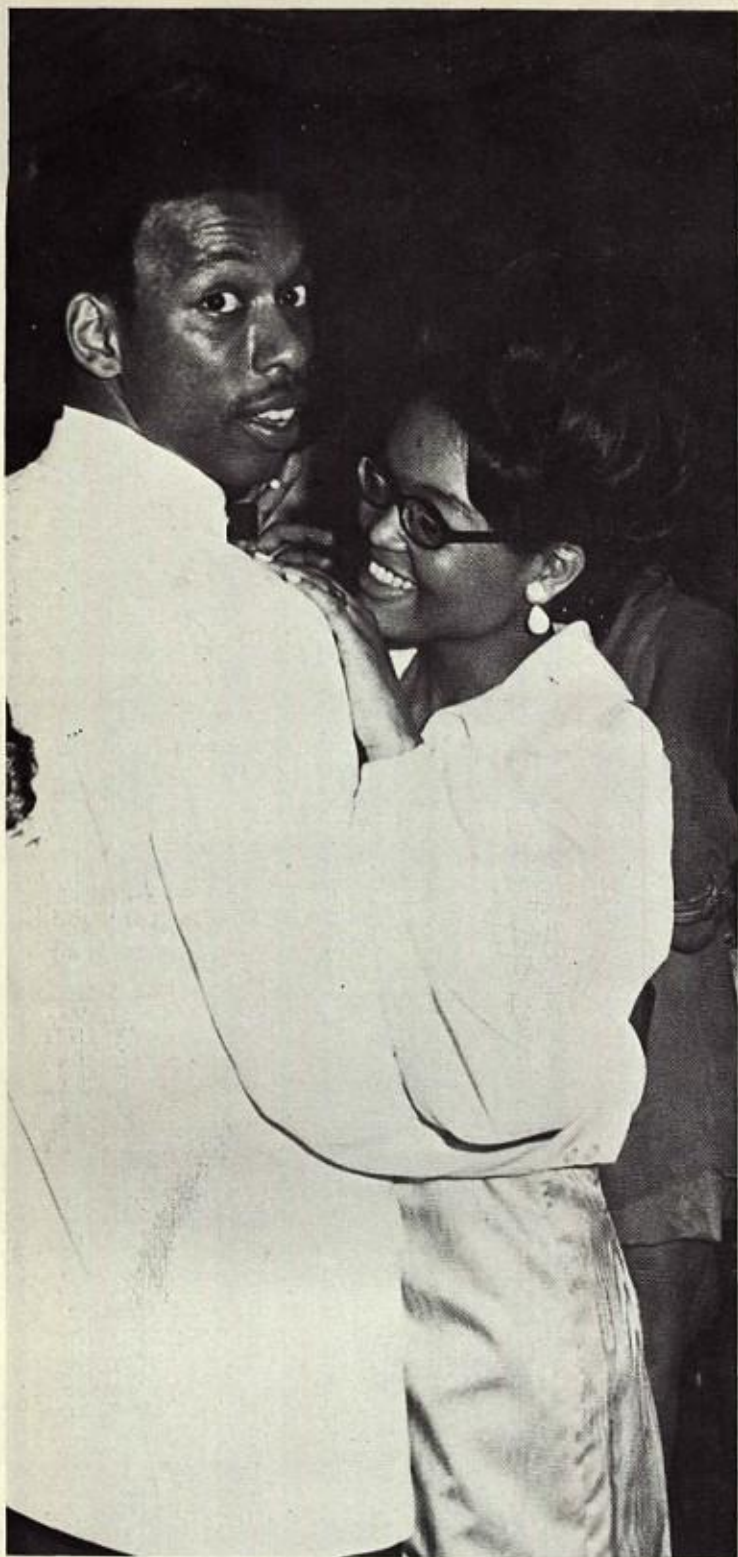

The first step to a wonderful evening.

Prom couples wait to enter the main ballroom.

Another example of class unity.

Smile. You're on candid camera.

Two couples work it out.

The action just never stopped at the Allderdice After-Prom.

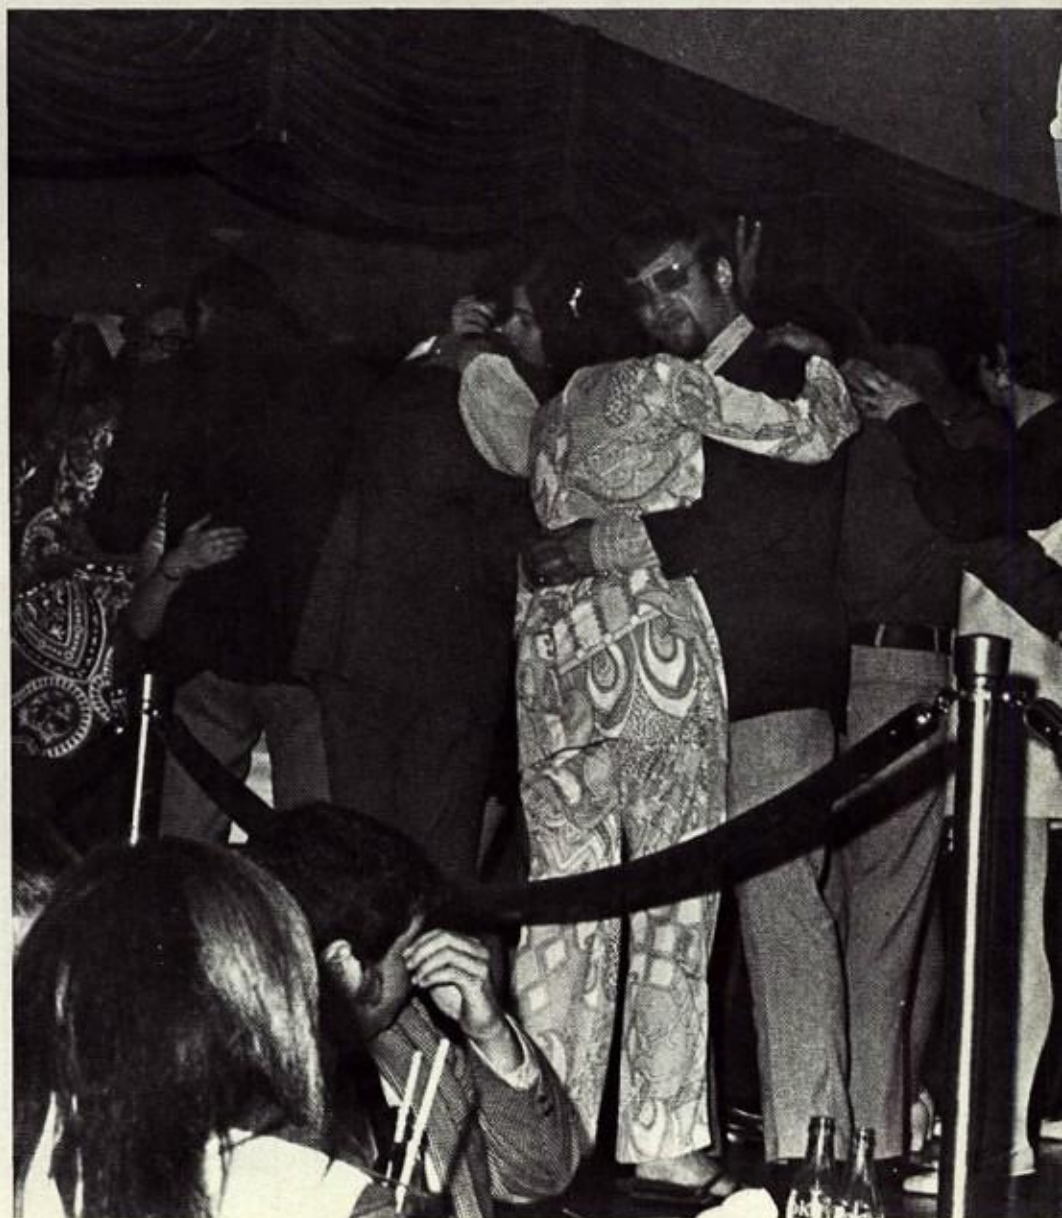

"We can dig it."

The weariness begins to show.

"The Prom was all right, but the After-Prom was out-of-sight."

Slow and soft.

... and the fun had just begun.

The soul survivors.

David Gombos will never quit.

Commencement — June 11, 1969

At last!

Louis Gordon delivers his "Farewell."

On June eleventh at the Civic Arena, Taylor Allderdice High School held its graduation ceremonies. Speeches by the valedictorians, caps and gowns, proud parents, and awarding of diplomas highlighted the evening. No one really knows what challenges lie ahead, but a high school education will help them accomplish whatever they desire.

The Processional

"It was the worst of times, it was the best of times," was the theme of Valedictorians Jeff Lewin, Bob Michaels, Ron Backer, and Neil Busis.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE STUDENTS FROM TAHS

Betty Rothbart and Seth Eaton

4/1/69

Each year, Allderdice, in conjunction with the International Fellowship Exchange Program, sends five students to South America, and in return TA hosts visitors from our neighbors to the south. This year, Patty Kaufman, Thelma Snyder, Craig Hardman, Cathy Abrams, and Seth Eaton were chosen to represent our school in the foreign exchange program.

Patty spent her summer in Belo Horizonte, Brazil, where she relinquished her American culture for the way of life of a Brazilian girl. She traveled all over Brazil and maintained the typical Brazilian life. She went to parties, danced the samba, and even got involved indirectly in a political revolution, when her "brothers" participated in a strike centering about education and the military.

Thelma Snyder also went to Brazil but lived in Rio de Janeiro at Ipanema Beach. She learned much about Brazil's culture and history, and toured other cities in Brazil. Upon returning to Rio after her tour, she insisted that Rio was the most beautiful city she had seen.

Craig Hardman visited Vina del Mar, Chile. He spent much of his time meeting people while traveling through Santiago, the capital of Chile, and his home town, Vina. He frequented the beach during his spare time.

Cathy and Seth went to Lima, Peru, where they studied in a Hebrew Peruvian and a French Peruvian school respectively. Through the International Fellowship Tour they visited the lost city of the Incas, Macchu Picchu. They lived with an Indian family in the mountains of Huancayo, an agricultural center. Both Cathy and Seth learned Spanish well, and continued their studies in Spanish II and IV.

All five students, though they lived with wealthy families, learned about all of the social and economic stratas of the South American countries. And they agree that this was the best summer of their lives.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE STUDENTS TO TAHS

(the S. American students)

Betty Rothbart

4/1/69

Often, we are too close to our way of life to be able to see it objectively. The three foreign exchange students from South America gave all who knew them a slightly different perspective.

Carol Evans, from Manta, Ecuador, spent the whole school year in Pittsburgh. She knew no English when she came but soon learned to speak fluently. Carol is lively and very adaptable; she learned to ski although she had never before seen snow, and she quickly got used to the co-ed and more informal classes here. She was impressed mostly with the vastness of the United States, the more relaxed relationships between girls and boys, and cherry Life Savers.

Eduardo Mendel, known throughout the school for his "Poor baby" quip and his Groucho Marx impersonation, noticed many differences between life in Santiago, Chile, and life in Pittsburgh. Eduardo enjoyed walking through downtown Pittsburgh, for example, because Santiago, although one of Chile's largest cities, has only many small shops and no huge department stores and modern skyscrapers. Another thing that surprised Eduardo about America was the widespread awareness of money and its great importance in American society. Classes, he commented, were conducted less strictly than in Chile, where students do not take part as much in class discussions.

Fabian Ochoa, from Manta, Ecuador, belonged to the Boy Scouts both here and in Ecuador. He went on several camping trips here and got along well without fluent English. Pittsburgh's delicious ice cream, "happy and understanding" teachers, and superb shop classes impressed Fabian very much. He was surprised by our high movie prices and parties in which there was less dancing and more conversation.

Roy Hunt, a Pittsburgher, visited Allderdice for two months this year to compare it to his school, St. Paul's Academy, in New Hampshire. Roy attended several senior classes and rated his visit as "an exciting experience."

All of the exchange students enjoyed the social atmosphere at Allderdice. In South America, one may not date more than one person, and that person must be a child of friends of the parents. Parties here, they commented, are quite different from the heavily chaperoned and more formal South American fiestas. They all agreed that coming to Pittsburgh is "a really nice city" and that Allderdice is "a really great school." To those who grumble occasionally about both Pittsburgh and Allderdice, these views from the South American students show that we probably underestimate our city and school.

Academic '69

The bell rings and you, along with hundreds of other kids, pour into the halls. Crammed into these narrow passageways you are swept along like a piece of dust on the floor. At such a moment you may wonder how it is possible that you, in a school of 3500 students, can emerge as an individual. But there is an escape, for once you seat yourself in the classroom a new cosmos unfolds around you.

What is this cosmos that lets you show and develop your individuality? Sitting in a classroom of thirty-five students, you find an atmosphere which is sometimes quiet and other times explosive. Here, you are a definite integral part in class discussions, discovering subjects you would never encounter on your own: the anatomy and behavior of a frog, the reasons for the Homestead Steel Strike, and quadratic functions in algebra. It isn't important whether or not you remember the details of a frog's respiratory system, the length of the steel strike, or the exact applications of the quadratic formula. What matters is the new, overall perspective you gain.

History Department Relates Past to Present

Hopefully, Allderdice's history department has prepared us for the future. Four new teachers, Miss Loftus, Miss Cummings, Mr. Manifold, and Mr. Metro, aided department head Mr. Schnupp and the returning history teachers in instructing the curriculum. Beginning in the ninth grade, students are shown how our government works socially, politically, and economically. The sophomore year of World History examines more attempts to solve problems from the past to the present. Our government and history are given a second look-over in AP or regular American History in the eleventh grade. The senior year shows a great diversity of courses with a few new ones added. Sociology and international relations, APE European History, or Behavioral Science and Humanities can be taken. In four years, hopefully, the history department gives Allderdice students a good look at our world, its problems past and present, and perhaps solutions for the future.

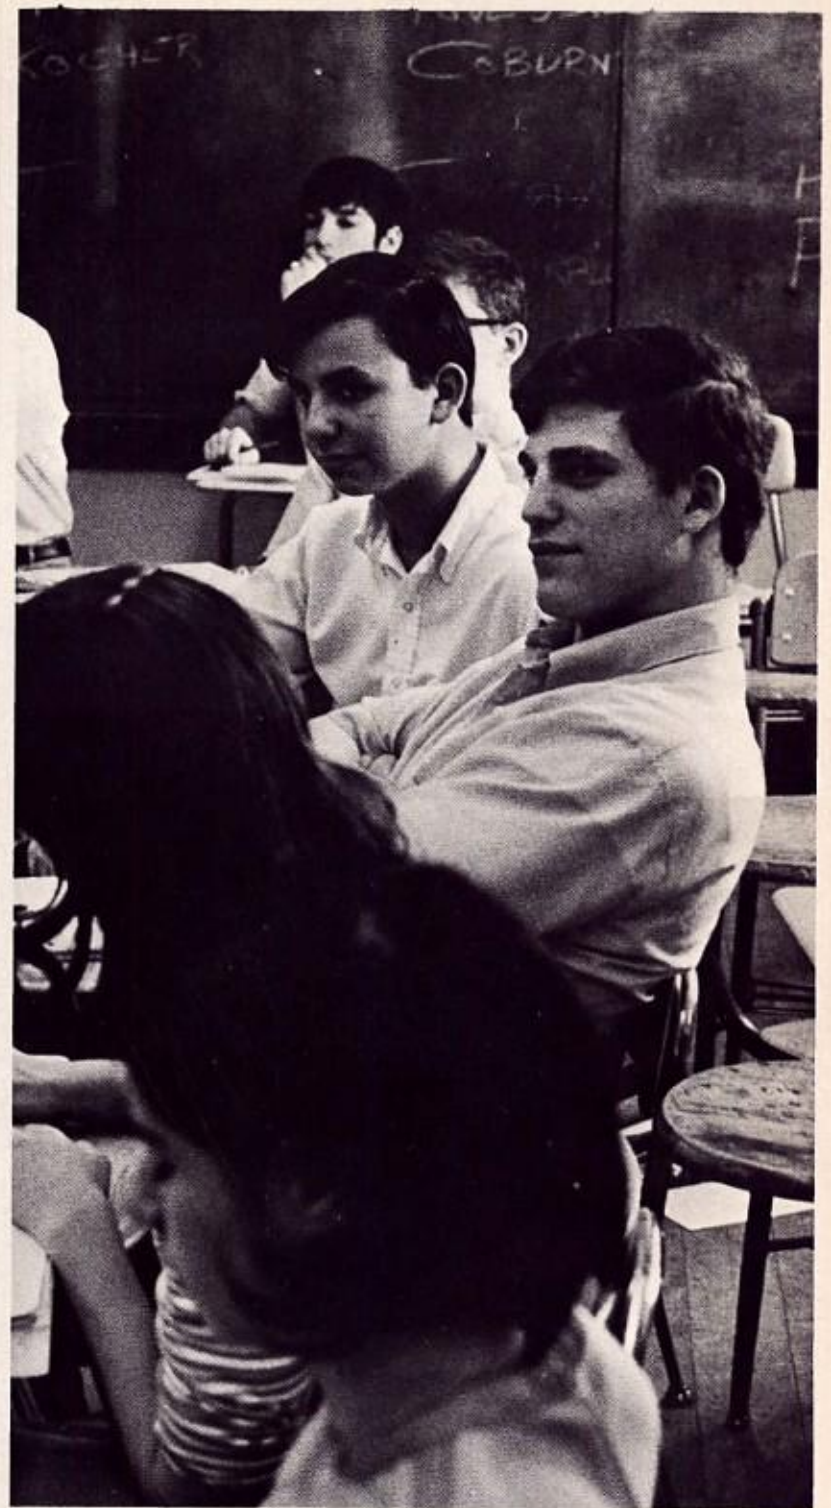

All right, who's the wise guy who gave Tiny Tim an A in history?" asks Mr. Manifold.

Science = Thought, Inquiry, Experiment, Theory

Allerdice's Science Department is not only the largest in the city, but quite possibly the best and most up-to-date. It has more classes, more AP classes, and the largest physics and chemistry departments. The traditional is not necessarily the guideline for Allerdice's science department. Instead, new ideas are constantly being developed. More emphasis is placed on concepts than on facts. Biology, for example, is being taught more from the chemistry approach, learning the body's processes instead of memorizing the processing parts.

With such an up-to-date science department, inspired and excellent science students are the inevitable product. To further their interests, Allerdice has several science clubs. Mr. Herman's Psycho-Biology Club entails a study of behavior mechanisms on a phyto-genetic basis and involves the nervous and endocrine systems and their influence on the behavior of organisms. Mr. Guarascio's Allerdice Explorers group gives students a chance for individual inquiry and research into areas not usually presented in class. The members of both this club and the Science Research Club have a chance to test their own theories and, therefore, develop better one's knowledge through experience. Some of the students also enter various science scholarship contests and do well. Allerdice's sixteen-teacher science faculty exercises and increases the faculties of each science student.

Problem: $\int_3^8 \frac{(t+2)dt}{t\sqrt{t+1}}$. If you can't work this problem just transfer it to a program and feed it to the newly installed teletype terminal. This terminal is connected to the Carnegie-Mellon University computer system, which enables selected students to learn the computer-programming language in their spare time.

The Math Department, headed by Miss Kunkle, set goals. It hopes to meet the math requirements of students going to college and to prepare students with math needed for everyday purposes.

This year, as in past years, Allderdice has sent top students in the eighth grade to compete in an algebra contest sponsored by the Western Pennsylvania Council of Mathematics. Senior high students compete in a National High School Math Contest sponsored by the Math Association of America. They always aim to win, and usually do.

Marty Rothman frantically works to get his homework done on time.

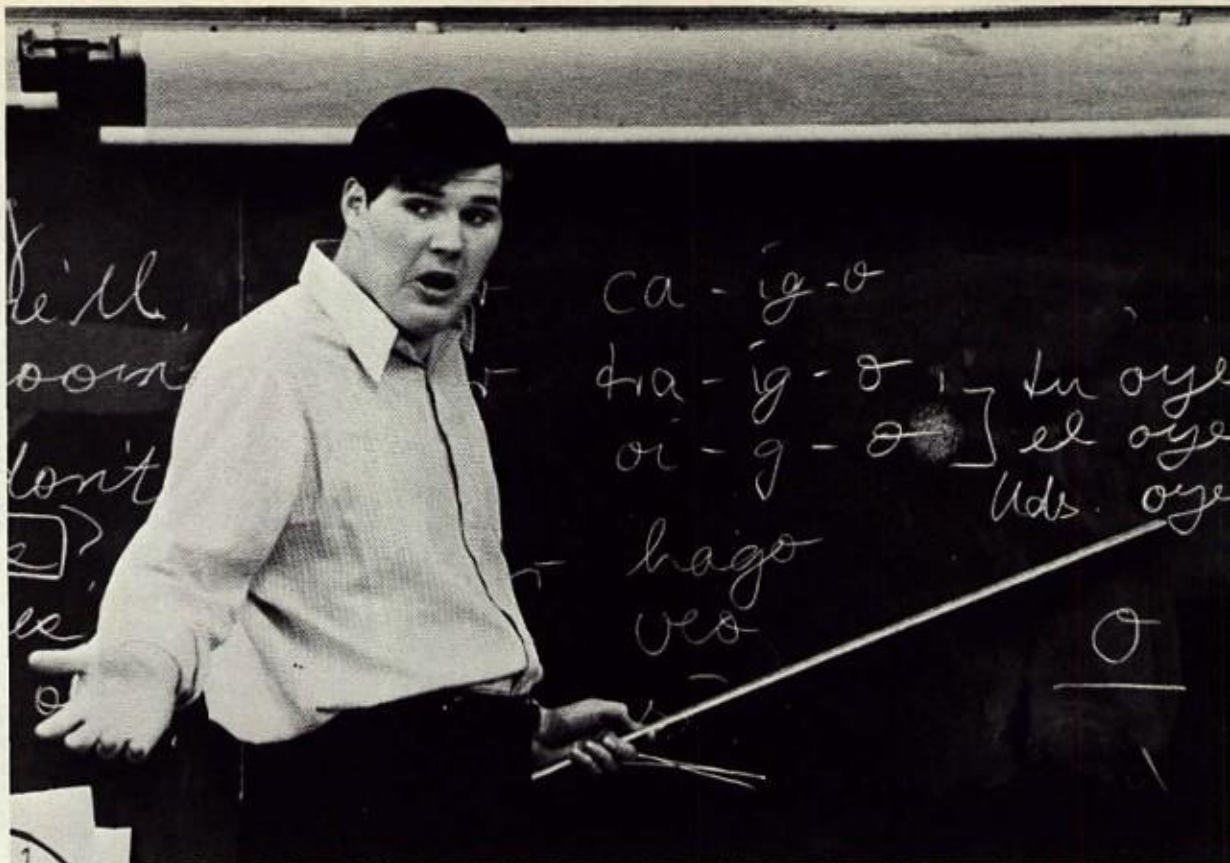

Miss Kunkle puts her students to work.

"Maybe I should have cleaned it first," thinks Barry Weiser.

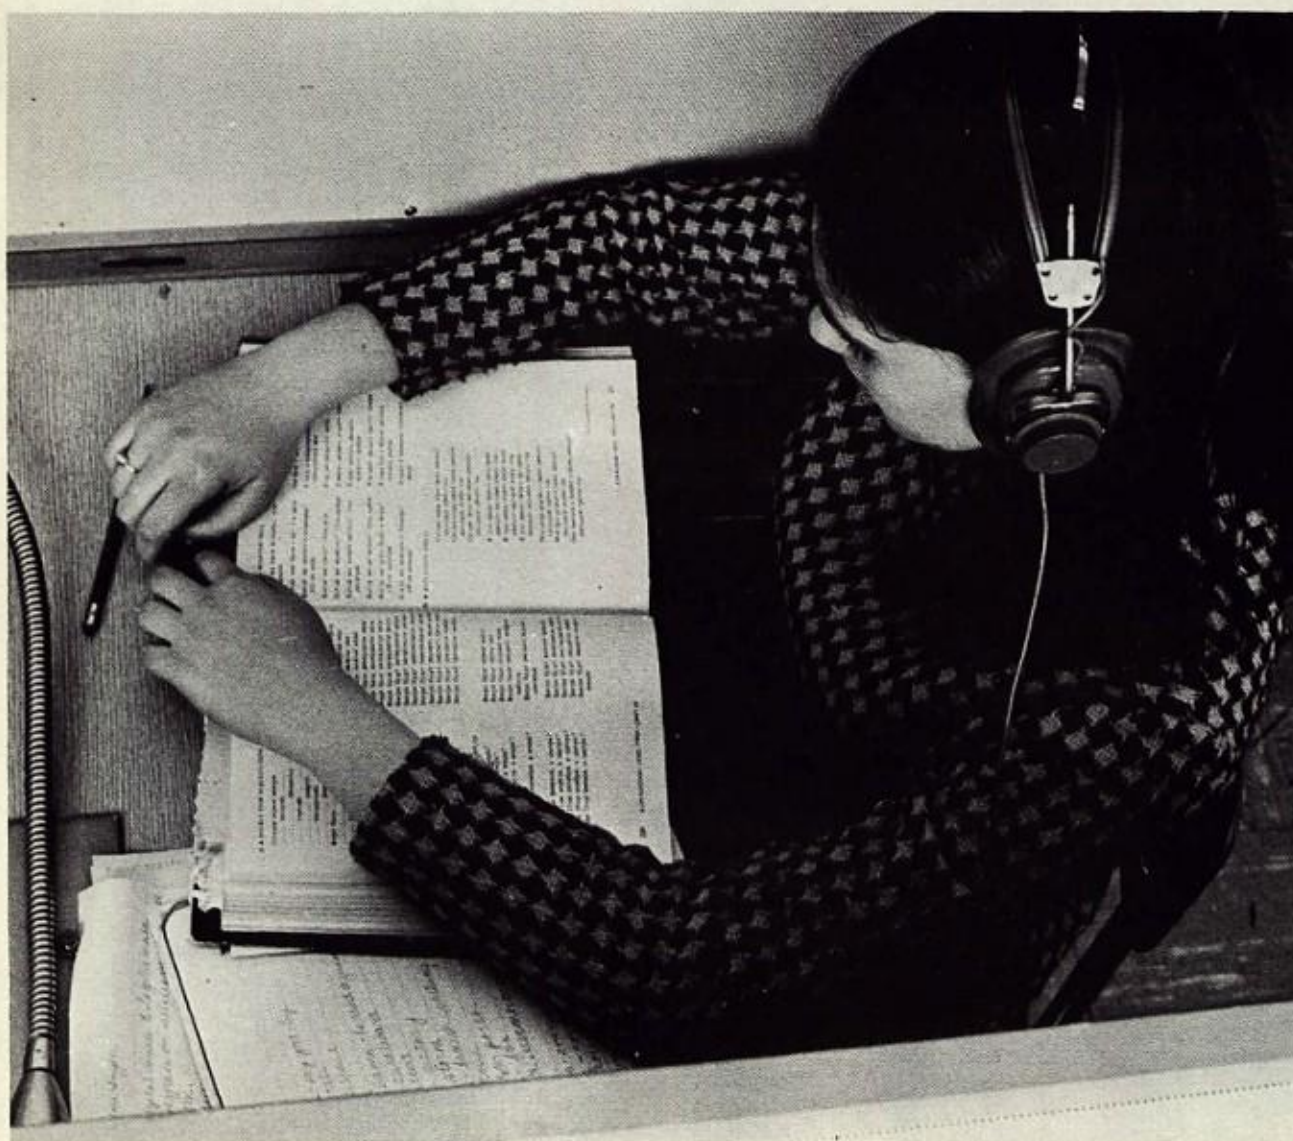

Interpreters in Foreign Language

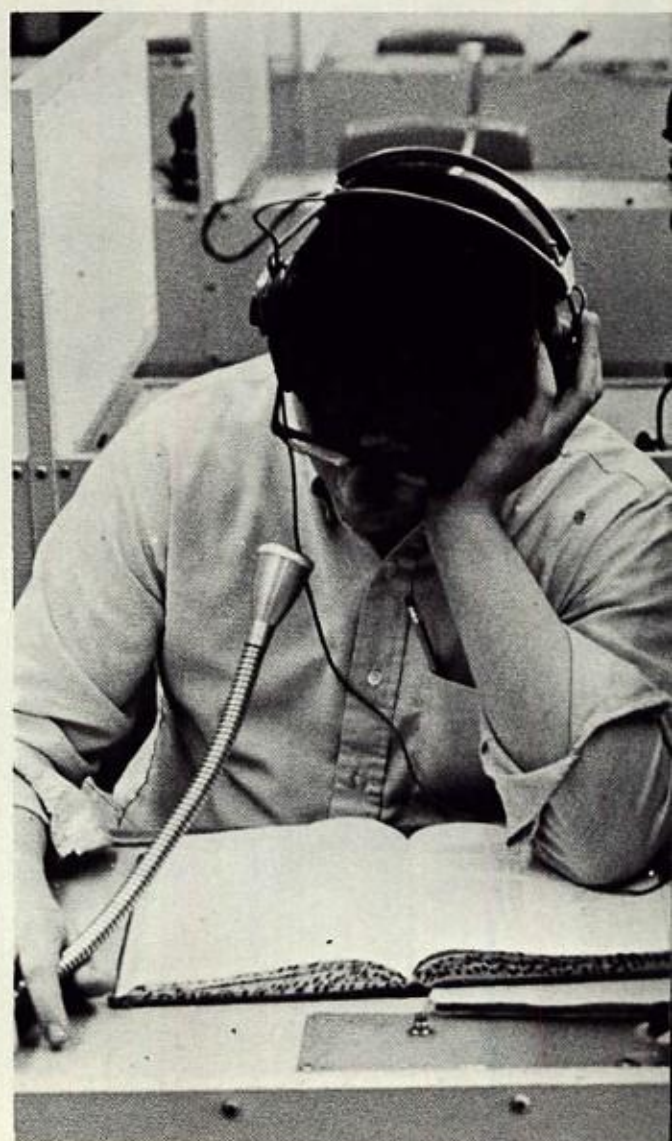

Richard Puciata says, "Now look, boys. I know this English, so let me explain it."

The Allderdice Language Department can help students communicate in French, Spanish, German, and Russian. Miss Gardill, head of the department, and fifteen other teachers help students speak, read, and write the language of their choice. Through repetition and listening, a relationship of informant to receiver is established between teacher and student. This audio-lingual approach is a modern and effective method of learning a language. Allderdice now has a native speaker in each foreign language offered. Since French, Spanish, and German courses are taught on levels I to IV, the language department is the largest in the city. This year Russian III was also offered along with Russian I and II. Learning to speak in a foreign language makes it much easier to understand and communicate with people in other parts of the world.

Getting the Business

How often have you walked past a classroom containing busily typing or writing students and wondered what goes on when the class sits quietly? TA business students work busily, learning clerical skills and business fundamentals. The business teachers wish to give their students a better understanding of their economic environment through an introduction to the world of enterprise. The courses stress principles of the operating business world.

Courses such as Exploratory Business and Bookkeeping teach accounting and business fundamentals. Students in Sales-Merchandising and Distributive Education learn principles of retailing, sales promotion, and customer service. The Business Department also includes a class called Law-Economics, which familiarizes the student with legal regulations in business.

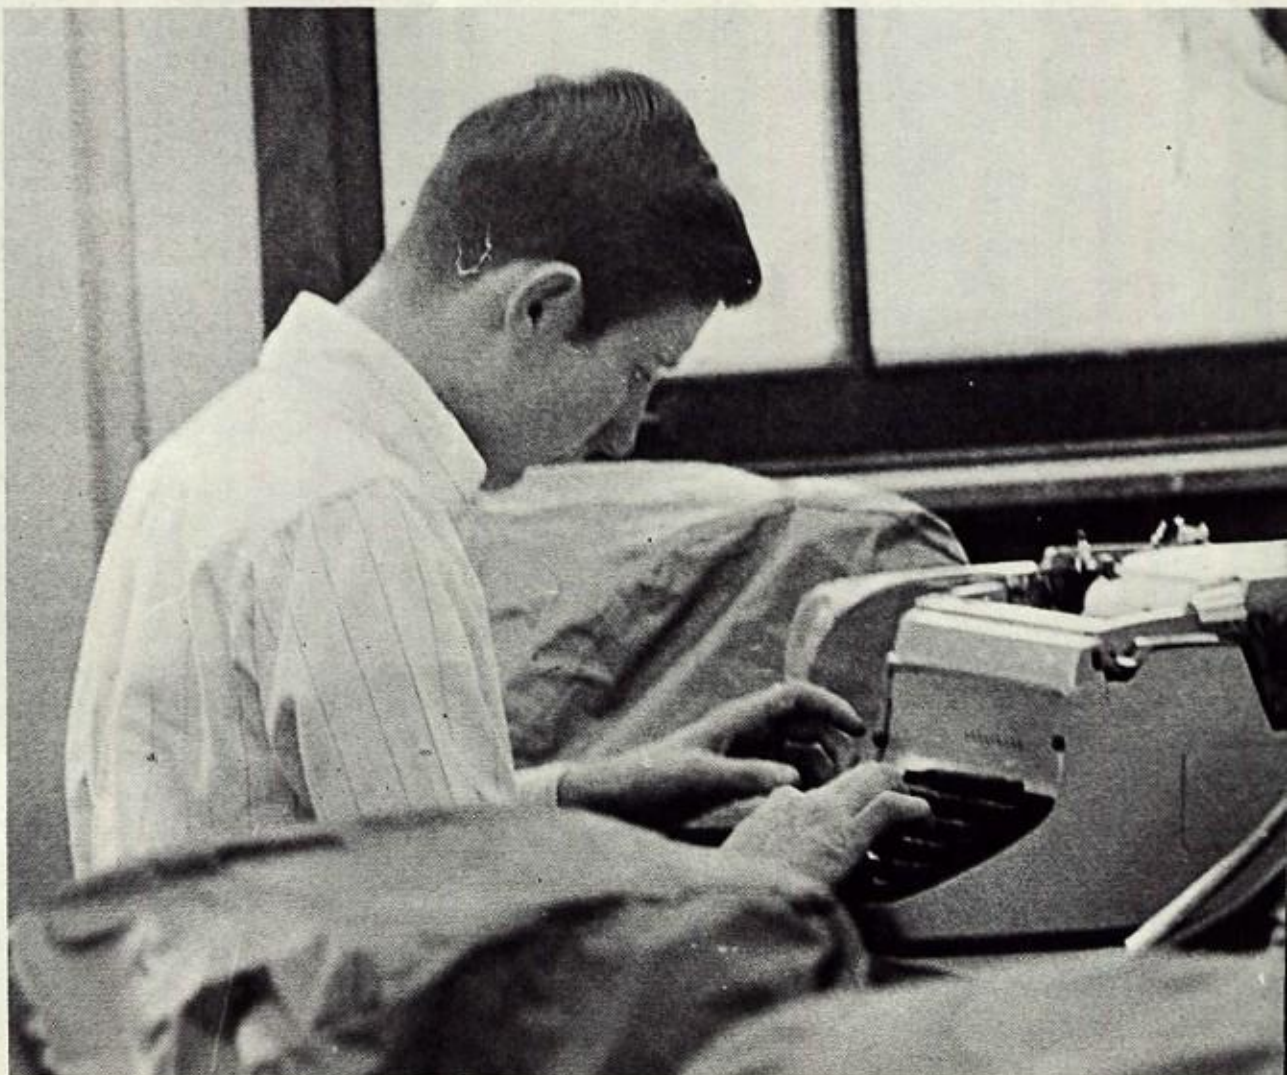

The Business Department also trains students in office skills. Clerical Training combines typing, shorthand, and office routines into one advanced course. The TA Business Department provides a comprehensive program of preparation for future business employees.

T.A. Girls Learn Modern Homemaking

Cooking and sewing used to be the major concerns of Allderdice's home economics department, but the growing complexity of a girl's life demands a more comprehensive curriculum. Learning how to prepare vegetables and cakes is not enough anymore; proper nutrition and protein and carbohydrate balance must also be taught. Furthermore, since there is often not enough time to cook a meal from scratch, cooking classes learn to use canned and frozen foods to prepare quick but good meals.

Sewing classes have also changed. The approach now involves not only how to sew, but also what styles, colors, and fabrics are best for the individual. Accessorizing and taking care of clothing are also discussed.

Units on child care, textiles, and home decoration round out the home ec curriculum, showing that it is truly geared to the modern, busy girl.

The Useful Arts

Allderdice's industrial arts program ranges from the most elementary projects to very complex problems in wood, metal, print, drafting, and electricity. The first years of shop are spent learning the fundamental skills necessary to produce projects such as napkin holders, ash trays, lamps, and paperweights. A student can progress to the senior shop classes and construct projects such as skis, tables, anvils, and printed emblems. Specialization in these areas aids students in beginning their professions.

What makes an art class different from other classes? Perhaps it's the fact that a student is unrestricted and can express himself in the art form which he feels to be appropriate. Mrs. Jacob, Miss Cole, and Mrs. Fulton instruct regular and advanced art classes while Mr. Kirkbride teaches crafts. Miss Wuchinich, a senior art teacher, offers a special course, 5X Understanding the Arts. Students study and create in the fields of sculpture, painting, architecture, and design for living, which undertakes practical application of art to everyday life. Many special events highlight the year's activities, including the Scholastic Art Exhibition, B'nai B'rith Contest, and the National Gallery Project, which is also affiliated with the English Department. Stop and Listen — The Orchestra

The clarinets and bassoons speak up for themselves.

Tom Garber intensely wrapped up in his music.

Donald Backer gives it the old one-two punch.

Double your pleasure with Stanley Maharam and Ace Barash.

Mr. Bunting carefully coordinating the various instruments in the orchestra.

If you would like to express your emotions or settle your mind through music, playing in the orchestra is an excellent way to do it. Allderdice's orchestra leader, Mr. Herbert Bunting, conducts five orchestras of varied ability, encouraging any student with musical ability to participate. The most talented group, A Orchestra, performs two concerts alone and two with Allderdice's choir, before the entire school. The spring and winter concerts are traditions at Allderdice. Music is also provided by A Orchestra for the Senior Honor Assembly and graduation ceremonies.

There are many reasons for the orchestra's popularity at school. One is the wide variety of music played, ranging from major overtures such as Beethoven's Eroica to contemporary arrangements by the Boston Pops. Also, three-fourths of the A Orchestra members are also members of All-City Orchestra. The musicians enrich our appreciation of art, and show us how the combination of each individual section of the orchestra produces the total encompassing effect.

Choir Raises Its Voice

Gloria, In Excelsis Deo. Gloria. The voices of A Choir arose from backstage. The Christmas program had begun. The choir then slowly filed onto the center of the stage, which was lit by only the tiny candles the singers carried. Mrs. Lewis, the director of the senior school choirs, stood conducting. The Choir had rehearsed daily for this concert. Mrs. Lewis, when instructing the choir, emphasized the importance of dynamics and knowledge of the interrelationship of the various singing parts. The choir, singing dynamically, concluded Gloria.

The ensemble, made up of A Choir members, was organized again this year. They and the rest of the A Choir sang at Hornes, Gimbels, and Equitable Gas.

There are four other choirs which Mrs. Lewis directs. Each, beginning with E choir, is a progression up the ladder in music proficiency. Mrs. Lewis teaches basics, such as learning to read notes, values of notes, and basics of choir ensemble. The junior school choir, instructed by Mrs. Puncheon, provides a fundamental base, enabling students to progress later to the more advanced choirs. This in future years will be an advantage for a well-prepared A Choir.

What's that foreign language they're reading?

The band's "little drummer boys" keep the beat.

TA's band department offers worthwhile experience for developing musicians. Two beginning ensembles and three performing ensembles comprise our band department, headed by Mr. Henry DiPasquale. Mr. DiPasquale accepts students on the basis of their desire and potential to learn. The beginning musicians work up to the more active performing bands. Activities of the best group, the Concert and Marching Band, include a performance for Teacher's Institute, a band festival in Richland Township, and several parades. The Concert Band also participated in two invitational events, one of which involved a trip to Erie County. This year's schedule also included a performance at the Three Rivers Arts Festival, and their traditional Winter and Spring Concerts. Mr. DiPasquale gives his musicians and audiences an integrated program of military marches, light mood music, show tunes, and classical works that demonstrate the organization's technical ability.

Phys Ed Shapes the Student Body

The main aim of the girls' physical education program is to get off some of those pounds! Of course, the girls work, too! They acquire skill in exercising and build speed by "chasing that Ball" in soccer. The girls also participate in such activities as hockey, basketball, tennis, and swimming. In hygiene classes the girls have interesting discussions not only about various diseases and body structures but also about first-aid and current health problems.

This year thirty-three girls shoved the puck in the Round Robin Tournament of Intramural Hockey. Led by Captains Donna Osburn, Kathy Kramer, and Linda Lee, they played spirited and steadily-improving games for two months. Kathy's team won the tournament, but all won extra points toward their Sports Letter.

"Eeeyoow!"

The games boys play in gym class aren't exactly the kind Eric Berne had in mind, but they are just as important to know about. There are very few things that permit one to be physically active during the mentally taxing school day, and gym affords the opportunity to work off the frustrations of the day in a fun, skill-building way. Whether it's goaling in football, hitting a home-run in softball, sinking a basket, or finally perfecting a backward dive, the boys attain the satisfaction and muscles that come from doing their thing well.

In addition to playing in games, the boys also take various tests in such things as push-ups, chin-ups, distance softball-throwing, and running the 600-yard dash. Six such tests are given, and the boys who end up with a final score of 600 are considered the elite of their gym class. Health classes teach the gymnasts everything from causes and cures of diseases of the body to causes and cures of diseases of the mind.

"What shall I do in my spare time?" Each student asks himself this question after school, and varied answers are available. Many dull and unimaginative alternatives come up—a snack at the drug store, talking at the wall, and as a last effort, doing homework. But these unproductive suggestions can't be followed every day. The solution? Alderdice offers many diverse extracurricular activities. A stimulating atmosphere characterizes club activities, service committees, and special interest groups. A student can talk, propose, and follow through with what he wants to do. He can learn about government in Student Council, places in language clubs, and how the natural world works in science clubs. Participating in extracurricular activities takes more effort than just going home after school, but the former is more interesting and rewarding.

Student Council 1969

This year above all others was a year of monumental importance for Student Council at Allderdice. Tom Lampl, Dave Pozek, and I inherited a student body which had little or no faith in Student Council. Not only was council re-born this year but it surpassed all other councils in the history of Allderdice in terms of concrete accomplishments and also by bettering the relations between the Jewish, Gentile, and Negro students at Allderdice.

We started the year by putting organization back into Student Council. We did this by first writing a constitution which gave us a foundation upon which we could attempt to build. No other Allderdice Student Council ever bothered to write a constitution. We continued our reorganization by having homeroom presidents serve as the council representatives. Our attendance averaged well over 85% the entire year. In fact, as the year progressed and the students' faith in Council grew, many students who were not elected representatives came to sit-in and vociferously take part in the meetings. A copy of each meeting's minutes was distributed to every homeroom for the first time in Allderdice history. We also started the "Council Corner" column in the Foreword to aid us in publicizing Council's goals, progress, and achievements.

After Council was organized we began to fulfill our campaign pledges. The first example of Council's usefulness came where we succeeded in changing the school ring. Previous student council officers had been attempting this for years; we succeeded where they had all failed.

Our second project, which began the first day of school, was to sell an All-Sports Ticket. For the price of $3.00 the All-Sports Ticket entitled its holder to attend all of Allderdice's athletic events. It was approximately a $10.00 savings for Allderdice sports fans. We did this solely for the benefit of the students as all the money raised from the 400+ tickets sold went to the athletic fund.

In November we planned and held our fourth annual Homecoming. Although the football team was only 4-3, we sold 450 tickets to the dance. This was more than were sold the previous year when we won the City football championship.

In December we began our school exchange program, hoping to give the student body a broader outlook on school systems. We conducted exchanges with Shadyside, Norwin, Gateway, Churchill, Ellis, Winchester, and Fox Chapel. A resume of exchange students' opinions and observations was mimeographed and distributed to all the homerooms.

Late in December after a meeting of leaders from the various committees, the students realized that despite the differences in the social and economic background of the community they shared many grievances. After several meetings which were open to the entire student body, representatives from the communities were elected and a list of grievances was formed. Under Student Council leadership the name Student Action Co-ordinating Committee was adopted, and we began meeting with the administration in an attempt to negotiate the grievances. These meetings resulted in a study of the counseling staff, a booklet containing a summary of all elective courses. A request to the Board that the auditorium lighting be improved, a study of the athletic facilities at Allderdice as compared with city and suburban schools, a declaration by Dr. Teal that girls were permitted to wear slacks with parental permission, that a request be submitted to the Board that the present Black History course be assimilated into the twelfth grade U.S. History course, and finally that no student caught leaving a tray in the cafeteria be suspended. I think that the results of these meetings do indicate the value of the Student Action Co-ordinating Committee, and I hope next year's officers choose to continue the committee.

In February we obtained permission in co-operation with PTA to have an assembly on drugs. Dr. Emile Trellis spoke quite honestly on the subject. In the same month we also held our foreign exchange student assembly to give recognition to the exchange students from South America attending classes at Allderdice and to kick-off the "Build a School in Peru" campaign.

Early in March we obtained an "office" for the Student Council Officers. Although it was only a room situated behind the stage, it gave us a place to attend to the almost endless paperwork involved in Student Council and also a place to discuss our new programs. While it is true that we obtained it far too late in the year to benefit us greatly, we held the hope that the idea would be continued in the future.

To assess the value of the 1969 Student

Student Council President
Rich Kline

Council one must look at two things: The relations between the three ethnic groups at Allderdice, and what we have done for the future Student Councils at Allderdice. We have worked hard and I think succeeded far beyond any other Taylor Allderdice Student Council. I feel that we have created perhaps for the first time the intangible feeling of respect for Student Council as an organization.—Rich Kline

Pubcom

This year Pubcom headed by Ray Grant, provided the school with many services, most prominent was Allderdice's first music program, WALL, with disc jockeys, Brad Simon and Berne Krupp. Both boys played pop music in the cafeteria for all five lunches with their own records. With the help of our twenty artists and elves, the ideas and projects of the 1969 Student Council were "published" with a freshness and vitality seldom seen in our school. Pubcom only forgot to announce one thing so now hear this: Pubcom did a fine job for all of us in '69.

Junior Student Council

This year the Junior Student Council started off rather late in the year. President-elect James Ellman began his term in January with Dean Goldman as vice-president. Secretary Sam Berkowitz, Treasurer Carlotta Harding, Publicity Chairman Bob Czerniewski, and the student council representatives all worked in coordination with Jamie and Dean. For their first major project, the Council attempted to sell tickets for the senior high school basketball games. The publicity committee worked hard and successfully in promoting the tickets to the junior school students.

The Council also handled the Build A School Campaign for the junior school. They vigorously sold buttons and bricks to bring in extra money needed in order to raise $1350.

The council's officers and a few homeroom representatives visited an area orphanage to see what volunteer work the council could arrange for future years.

Although the Junior Student Council started in the middle of the year, they not only managed to sponsor some valuable projects, but also succeeded in unifying the seventh, eighth, and ninth grades in a productive unit for the school.

Yearbook: A Year's Work

Lynn Ferber and Gary McCormick do some shifty record keeping business for the yearbook.

Smiling Mr. Thompson, the O. J. Simpson of the Yearbook Staff.

Gary Finkel, layout editor; Betty Rothbart, copy editor; Frank Harris, editor in chief; and Lyn Kirshenbaum, photography editor; all dedicated, nerve-wracked, and loyal (and do most of the work!).

When most people first see their yearbooks, they see only the completed, polished work. But to members of the yearbook staff, the yearbook is a compilation of many months of hard work, done not only in the daily yearbook period but also, when deadlines approach, after school, in the evening and on weekends.

The last year of high school is a tremendously significant one for the graduates, and the staff tries to make the yearbook the only tangible memory of the senior year, a book that really reflects what went on. It must be poignant but not mushy, true but never depressing, must produce nostalgia sans nausea. Photographs show in candid shots different moods found in individual students. Copy tells of special events, clubs, sports, and academic departments, not only to remind and give an entire picture to the graduates, but also to inform those who will know Allderdice only through going through The Allderdice. The layout staff strives to make pages artistic and eye-catching, while the ad staff sells space in the Ad Section to community businesses, homerooms, and individuals who want to give a message to the graduating seniors. And the typing staff bears the brunt of having to type articles and picture identifications on to the triplicate layout sheets to be sent to the publishers at the last minute.

An entire year must be printed and bound and distributed, and the hardworking yearbook staff, led by the even more over-worked editor-in-chief, gives the yearbook subscribers and their friends an honest, complete look at a stretch of event-crammed time.

The tremendous trio of the layout staff arranged the pictures on these pages Jackie Persky, Hedy Gruenebaum, and Gary Finkel (editor).

The Fantastic Four, David Faigen, Nancy Nelkin, Martha Schaefer, and Betty Rothbart (editor), are responsible for all the words in this yearbook—including this outline.

Foreword

These people make the FOREWORD possible. They inform, amuse, and challenge the students, the faculty and the administration with news articles, feature pieces, and sports reviews.

Editorials present opinions of impending issues and offer remedies. Controversial "From Within" lends itself to disagreement and provokes debate.

Each Foreword is the product of hours, days, and weeks of hard work. There are leads to track down and write up, beats to cover, deadlines to meet, and articles to type.

The editors must cope with the pressures of correcting type, doing make-ups, and sending copy to press. They work emphatically to please the reader.

The world of room 368 is hectic, but filled with fresh, new ideas; for everyone in the FOREWORD office is involved in running a newspaper.

The results have been more than rewarding; the proud feeling of seeing the finished product—the issue—is indescribable.

The FOREWORD is the voice of Allderdice—it speaks to, of, and for the students of our school.

Allderdice Girls Plan for the Future

"I wonder if Hugh Hefner started this way," exclaim members of FBLA.

Allderdice's future secretaries find that membership in the FBLA provides their best introduction to the business world. By hearing the advice that guest speakers offer about applying for a job, getting the jobs they want, and other inside trade secrets, girls who belong to the FBLA often have an advantage over other business aspirants. This year, President Sharon Sholock and the other business entrants toured several businesses and business schools absorbing the atmosphere and observing the scene.

"Words Govern Men" — Benjamin Disraeli

Jeff Lewin, Bob Michaels, and Mark Perlis bring home some debate trophies to shine in Mr. Forry's cave.

Forensic circles throughout the country found out this year that the name Allderdice represents a group of excellent, winning debaters. TA's varsity, led by Debate Club President Bob Michaels, Jeff Lewin, Mark Perlis, and Peter Abrams, traveled this year to national invitational tournaments in six cities, capturing first place trophies in many of them. The national topic this year involved the proposal that the United States should establish a system of compulsory service for all citizens. In order to enable TA to spread its arguments for or against this proposal, a Parent's Booster Club was established. This helps the club in getting judges for tournaments and providing transportation and funds in emergencies.

The Debate Club contains two main divisions: debate and speech. Students from grades nine through twelve are eligible to join the Debate Club, one of Allderdice's finest and best-known groups.

Almost everyone has questioned himself on a multitude of topics such as draft resistance, euthanasia, capital punishment, birth control, foreign aid, and drug use and abuse. The Senior Discussion Club provides a chance to question others and hear their answers. Moderator Seth Eaton regards the club as a forum for "swapping thoughts, hang-ups, and for establishing friendships." Call them discussions, arguments, rationalizations, or informal debates—any one or several of these terms describe the bi-monthly meetings of the Senior Discussion Club.

"The unexamined life is not worth living" was Socrates' motto, and now it is echoed by the members of the Philosophy Club. Once a week the club meets to discuss the beliefs of well-known theologians, authors, and personalities such as Alan Watts, Dostoevski, Aristotle, E. E. Cummings, and Jean-Paul Sartre. Greek philosophy, existentialism, and other schools of thought are explored, often inspiring some of the members to research even more thoroughly. Sponsor, Mr. Lloyd Welling, introduces many new ideas to the members of the club, not only enabling them to examine the limitless variety of other people's thoughts but also enabling them to develop a firmer basis for their personal philosophies.

Math and Science Branch Off in New Directions

Sponsor: Miss Kunkle.

Into Room 267 piled about forty juniors and seniors. After they gave the chairs in the room an identity, President Jeff Lewin announced the topic of the meeting. This week the Math Club would hear one of a series of lectures by college math professors. Other weeks various students lectured and led discussions on various mathematical concepts.

The Math Club gives motivated math students a chance to explore aspects of math not covered in math classes. This year a teletype link with the Carnegie-Mellon University computers was installed, giving the members of the Math Club a chance to learn to program and to use computers.

Math Club members wait for an answer after typing a program.

Students Cultivate Foreign Cultures

The Spanish, French, German, and Russian Clubs take over where language classes stop. With the increasing accessibility of foreign countries, it becomes necessary to learn not only foreign languages but also foreign customs and culture. French Club, for instance, put on fairy-tale plays in French under the capable direction of President Maxine Solomon. A trip to a French-speaking section of Canada was also planned.

In the German Club, President Marty Seltman planned many excellent programs. The German Carnival, the International Dinner, and a German pastry bake sale demonstrate the ambition of the capable and hard-working members. Other activities of the German Club involved dining at a local German restaurant, singing "lieder," dancing German folk dances, and inviting a number of native German speakers to address the group.

The Spanish Club, like the Russian and French Clubs, was formed this year. Its projects, co-ordinated by President Michael Graff, have included helping to build a school in Peru, inviting native speakers to the meetings, and sponsoring a Spanish movie.

Under the supervision of Mrs. Weinrich, the twenty-five members of the Russian Club meet three or four times a month to discuss anything from Russian literature to the lives of its most famous poets. The club has seen slides and has heard tapes and records concerning Russia and its people. A Russian Christmas party was held where all sorts of Russian delicacies, ranging from caviar and crackers to Russian rum cake, were served.

The competition and excitement produced by the Chess Club perhaps have enabled it to remain the oldest club in Allderdice. Led by President Ray Grant and sponsored by Mr. Mason, the forty members acquire skills and a sense of competition through intra-club play. At the end of the year the top players compete in the Inter-scholastic Chess League of Pittsburgh where Allderdice is always a top competitor.

Many young men have graduated from Allderdice with an eye towards law school, but not until this fall has a club been formed to cater to this growing group's interests. Chuck Kronzek led the Pre-Legal Society in visits to the courthouse, crime labs, the Public Safety Building, and the FBI headquarters. Many prominent attorneys also spoke to the 35 members to round off a profitable year.

The kids slouched in their chairs, listening to the announcements floating over the intercom. After the announcements ended, they began to talk to each other, gossiping, discussing, joking. Suddenly an authoritative voice boomed.

"Need your money we sure do

Buy A Brick - Build

The stakes are high in this poker game—$1300 to help educate children in Peru.

"I bought one. And some child in Peru will be glad I did," exclaims Janet Levine.

We did it!

Collique Elementary School #3, situated on the outskirts of Lima, Peru, served a community of 10,000 impoverished families. It was actually only a thatched hut with no heating or sanitary facilities. Only 75 wooden desks were available for 600 students; the others sat on rocks or chairs brought from home. As with most of Peru's public schools, almost all of the students dropped out of school before the ninth grade.

Learning of Collique's situation, Allderdice's students, led by Seth Eaton, launched a fund-raising drive in conjunction with the School Partnership program to build a modern four-room building to replace the thatched hut. Colorful posters were hung, and buttons were sold bearing the slogan, "Build a School."

Spirits rise as the goal of $1300 gets closer.

Volunteers sold paper bricks, symbolizing each buyer's part in the construction of the school, for a dollar. Each Allderdice history class learned the importance of the project by inviting a Peace Corps worker, a university professor, or an exchange student from South America to speak on the subject. Each class viewed the film, "Beyond Agua Caliente," a documentary describing the construction of a school in rural El Salvador.

By the end of the campaign week, Allderdice had raised $1525, and by the end of March the people of Collique had the school built and ready for classes to resume in a new school made possible by energetic and caring Allderdice students.

Seth Eaton proudly presents the check which shows what a united Allderdice effort can do.

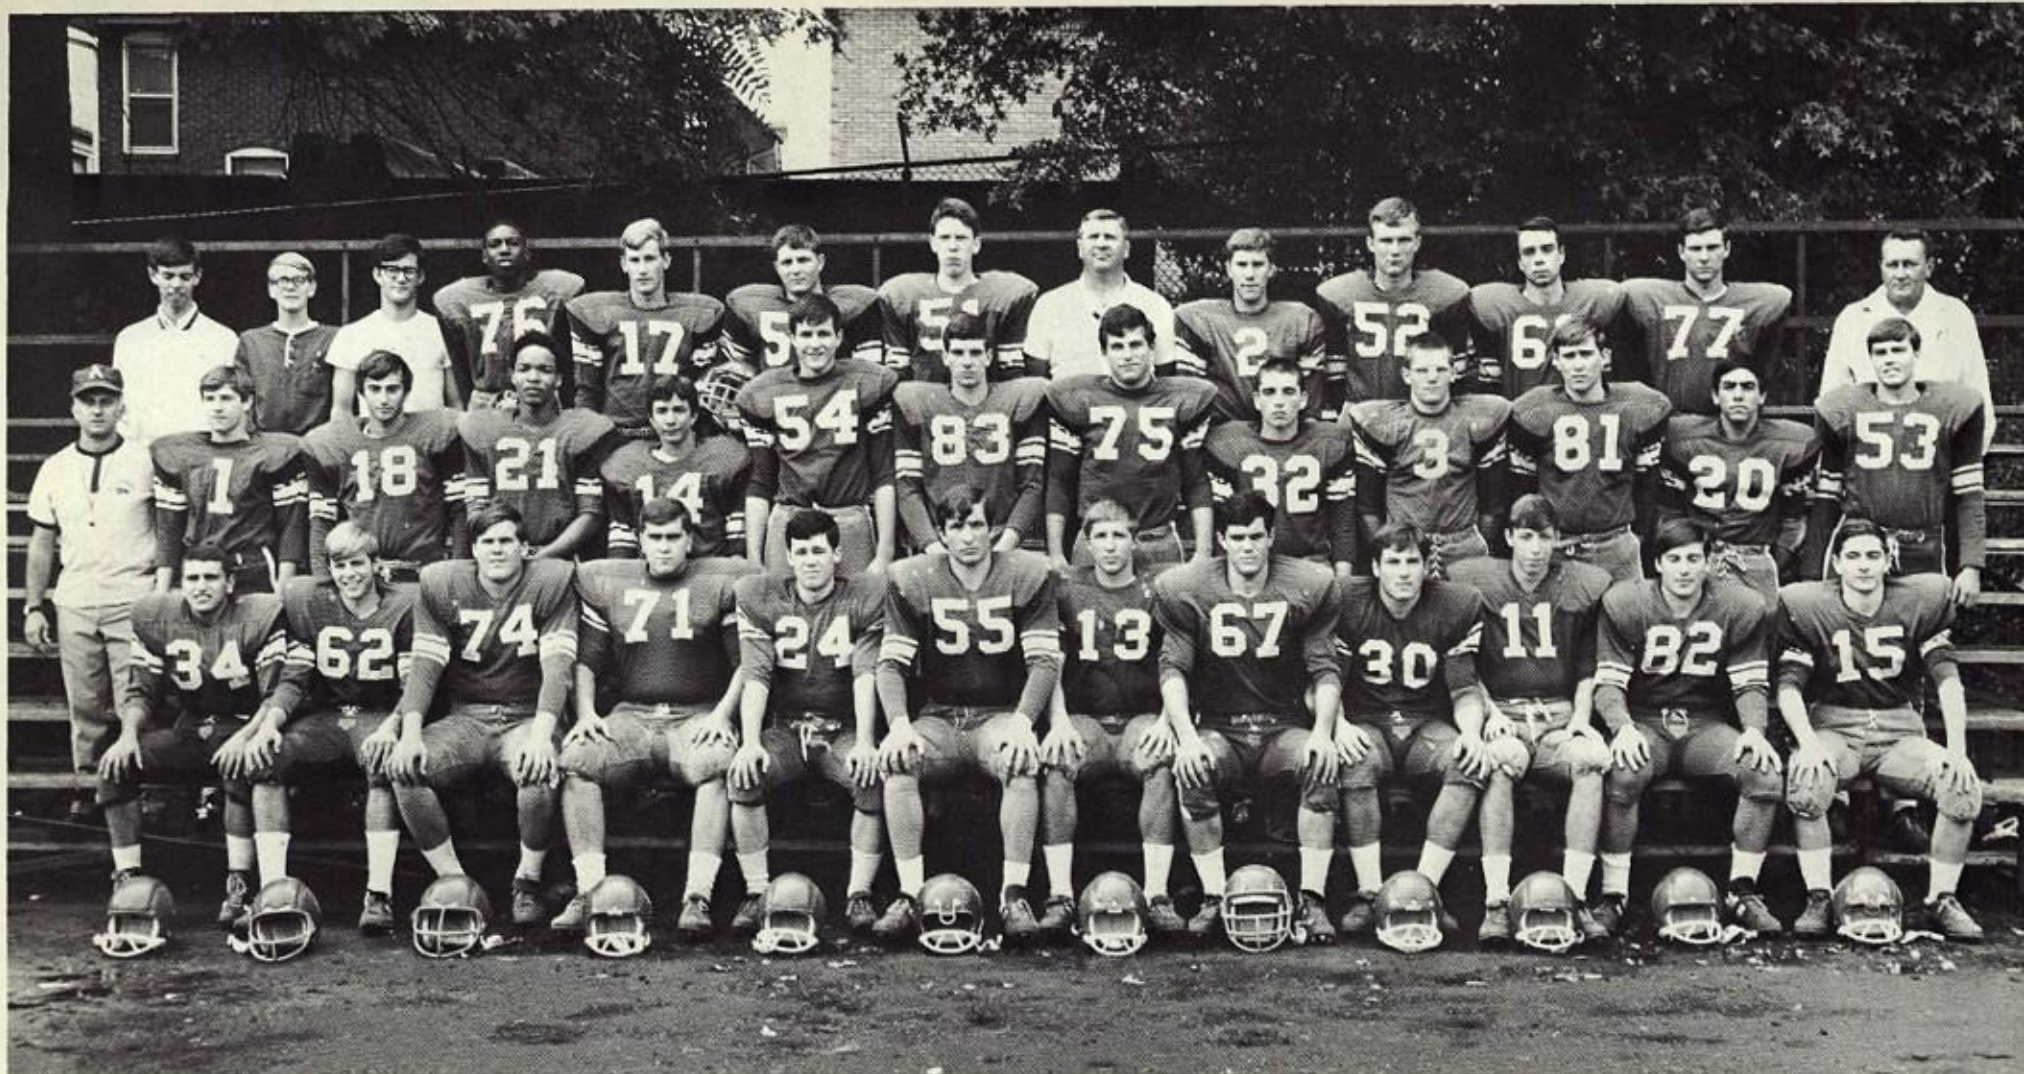

Sports '69

Standing stiff and hesitant in the center of the basketball court, one person ready to shoot a foul. The ball turning quickly in nervous hands, knees bending, skin gleaming with sweat. Eyes shine, concentrate, assess; the brow furrows. With a sudden thrust of energy, the ball springs from the strong hands, shooting upward, out, over to the basket with the accuracy and force of a spherical guided missile. Reaching the basket after what seems like hours, the ball lands on its edge, for a moment balancing there and then . . .

Sports! apprehension, fun, competition, exercise, effort, pressure, happiness. Somehow, no matter how many people there might be on a team, it is each individual player who at some time becomes the object of recognition or evaluation, who wonders if he does his best and sometimes wonders if it's all worth it. He experiences both the effort and the ecstasy of kicking, diving, batting, running, leaping, stretching, pushing. He makes his goal in football in more than one way; he learns how to play a foul but also how to handle foul play. Sports is the group, but much more it is the individual.

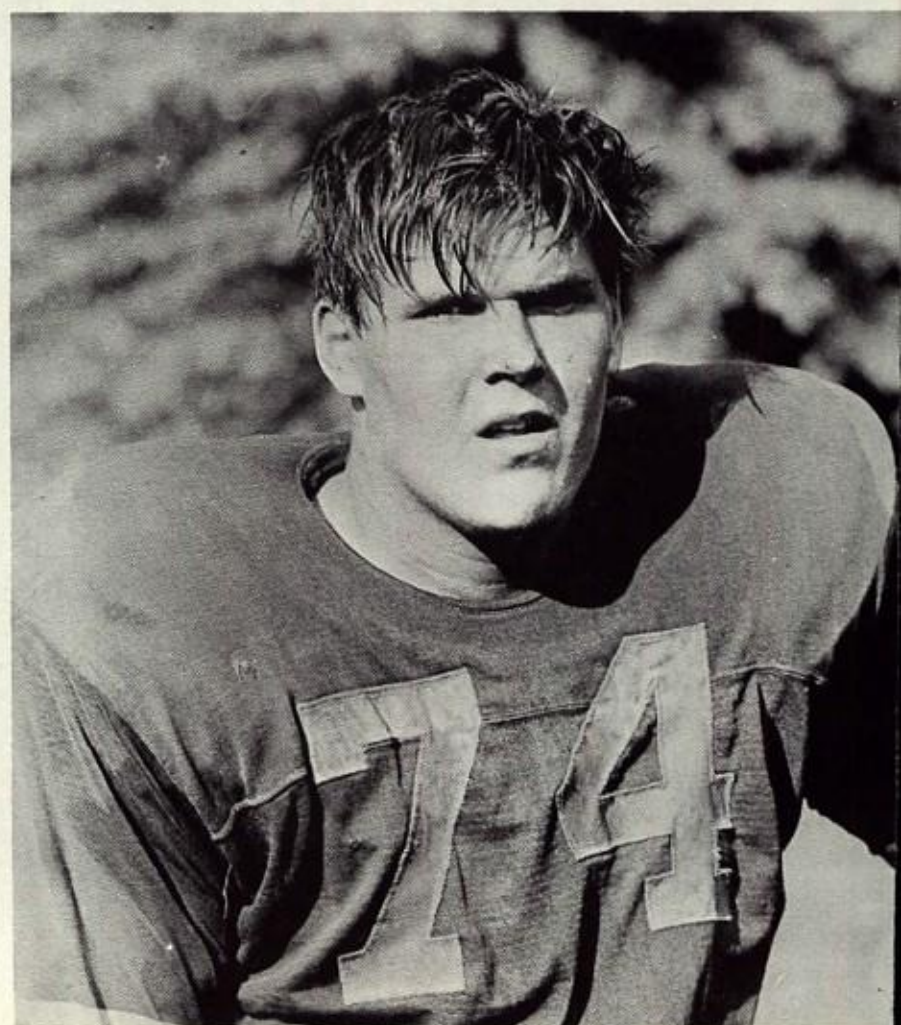

. . . the ball hesitated, as its shooter had hesitated, and finally fell through the hoop.

The Dragons Almost Made It

The big question on Allderdice's football this year was whether we could win the city championship two years in a row. With returning lettermen and promising rookies, Allderdice edged Schenley in the season opener. Running straight ahead, the Dragons were trampled by a Westinghouse team which could really run. A commanding victory over Gladstone illuminated the team's spirit; then close losses to South Hills and Carrick dimmed future hopes. But the Allderdice spirit could never be put down. Winning our remaining games, Allderdice finished with a fine five-three record. The goal of another city championship was not reached, but Coaches McNertney, Giovane, Dunlap, and the entire football squad worked hard toward this goal and learned many things on the way. And that made it all worthwhile.

Basketball — Always Reaching for That Hoop

Dragon basketball fans were disappointed this year if they were looking for an impressive win-lose record. The Allderdice team fought through a long season of exhibition and city league games winding up with a five and ten record. Putting a lot of effort in practice after school, Coach McNertney and the entire squad deserved the school's support during the school year. The boys learned a little about life from losing, inasmuch as you have to keep trying no matter how bad the outlook is. For the future Taylor Allderdice basketball has no promising super-stars, but some talent is there. And with the school's support you can never tell what will happen.

Swimmers Capture Title Again

It was another winning year for the Allderdice swim team—City Champions! No one doubted we would reign as champs for the second time in three years after Allderdice drowned Peabody, our closest competition, in the first league meet. In similar fashion, the rest of the swimming team's opponents were met and conquered. Finally, in the City Championship meet, Perry fell under the tide of Allderdice power. Mr. Roth, our excellent coach, worked this year with a group of boys dedicated to the betterment of the teams. The swimmers built up the morale of the team by giving that extra support which only a certain type of person can give. They were well rewarded and hopefully the city championship will continue to be a tradition of the Allderdice swimming team.

Weeks of practice went into this one race, and an Allderdice swimmer never fails the final test.

"If I were only 30 years younger," thinks Coach Roth.

Guess where Mr. Roth is going to wind up?

Harriers Give Their All

Picture boys in tee shirts and shorts, on a teeth-chattering afternoon, running relentlessly. Only the time keepers are watching, and the results might be heard by a few students on the homeroom bulletin. Imagine someone spending seven days a week practicing, running alone so that he can perhaps improve his time by a few seconds. These are TA's Cross Country runners, determined and hard workers. This year no impressive record in the city league or city championship was seen. But the boys tried hard, giving a large part of their time and energy each day. And who could ask for more?

Setters and Spikers

Surprisingly enough, Allderdice's Volleyball team had only two seniors, and played excellently despite a three-four record. South, Carrick, and Fifth Avenue were overcome by Allderdice's skill and patience. Inexperience was the main cause of losses this year to Oliver, Washington Vocational, Perry, and Peabody. With practically the entire team returning, Coach Dunlap is looking towards the city championship and also the state championship at Penn State next year. School support should be excellent for the volleyball team next year—it better be for a winner.

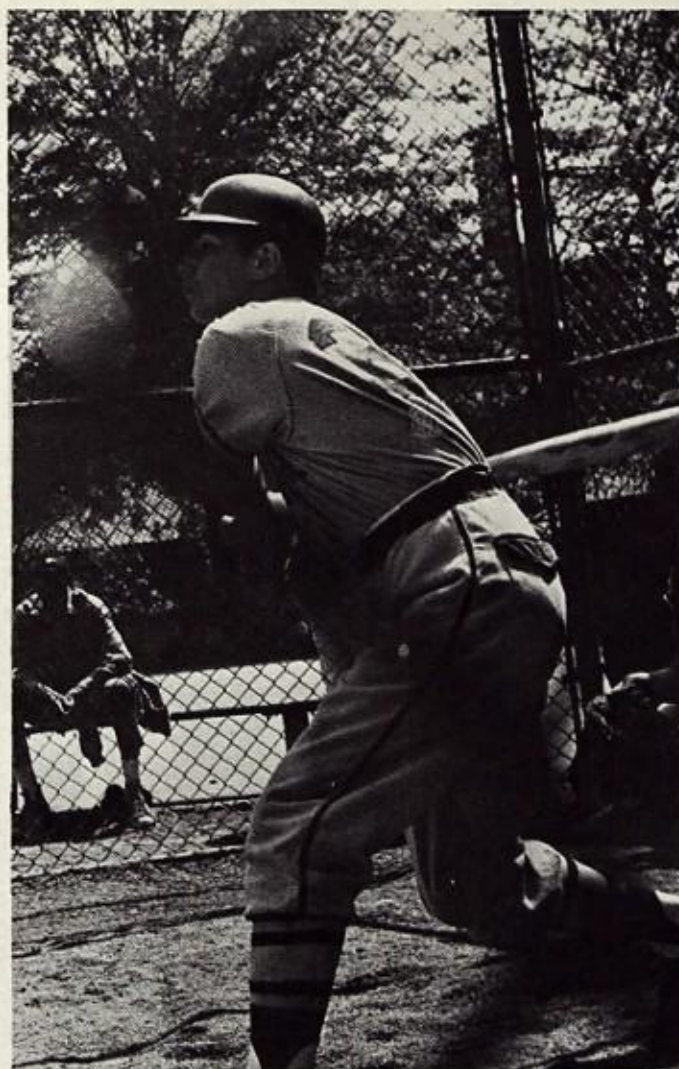

A perfect hit everytime for the Allderdice volleyball team.

Steve Braun hammers that ball over the net.

Baseball Scores High

The bat and glove men of Allderdice once again compiled an excellent season record in one of TA's most famed sports. Strong pitching was responsible for most of the victories, whereas hitting is usually the team's forte. A well mixed group of returning lettermen and freshmen carried the team to the heights they attained. Coach Dunlap, in his first year as baseball coach, united the entire baseball team by extensive practice, making their excellent season record well deserved.

Allderdice's track team had an excellent chance of finishing near the top of the city competition this year. Containing an arsenal of strong runners, pole vaulters, discus throwers, hurdlers, jumpers, and shot putters, united by team spirit, Allderdice was a powerful track threat this year. But it takes more than just great individual athletes and spirit to produce a winning team. The athletes must be coordinated through long hours of practice under the direction of the coach. Allderdice had such a team this year under Coach Gillespie, and their finish near the top confirmed this.

This year Coach Mason and the tennis team looked forward to an unprecedented fourth consecutive city championship. The netters started the season off right with four straight victories, including a crucial victory over arch-rival Peabody. The question remained, however, whether Allderdice's team could win a fourth straight title. The team was a fine one, consisting of many returning lettermen—two undefeated and one a two-time city champion. Winning consistently in both singles and doubles competition, the tennis team did bring a city record to Allderdice athletics.

Fifty-three outstanding gymnasts pursue their interests through the Senior and Junior Leaders Clubs. Under the leadership of Co-Presidents Nancy Lloyd and Donna Osburn and Sponsor Mrs. DeLuca, the Senior Leaders Club provides Allderdice's senior high girls with the opportunity to compete with each other in hockey, speedball, basketball, volleyball, and softball. The members also participate in city-wide "play days" in which they compete with other senior high girls.

The Junior Leaders Club, with the aid of Sponsor Mrs. Pittman and President Barbara Tabachnick, provides its members with the incentive to form a sense of responsibility by continuously rating them on various aspects of character. At the end of the year, the girl with the highest rating in personal appearance, responsibility, cooperation, and good citizenship wins the Superior Leader Medal. Members of both clubs help their gym teachers in such tasks as taking roll, officiating at intramural games, and organizing the class if the teacher is detained. Through the activities of their clubs Junior and Senior Leaders gain a sense of responsibility.

"Extra, extra! Read all about it! We've got a team ..." shout Allderdice's Junior Cheerleaders. Headlined by Captain Barbara Tabachnick, the Junior Cheerleaders provide "extra" support for our Junior Varsity and Junior High teams. Mrs. McDowell coaches this feature attraction, enabling them to liven up game time.

HOMECOMING CHEERLEADERS: Left to Right: Tom Lampl, Mark Pollock, Mike Small, Billy Wedner, Tom Sapper, Wally Ellman, Wally Pease, Lou Gordon.

The Allderdice majorettes add a little halftime entertainment during homecoming.

After graduation from high school, a student wants to look back at former friends, classmates, school organizations, and community businesses that shaped his high school life. The Ad Section provides a way for underclassmen to say goodbye to their senior friends. In looking back a graduate recognizes many familiar names, faces, and places.

This section also contains pictures of seniors waving goodbye to their classmates and wishing them luck. When flipping through this section, a graduate remembers the many exciting moments and personalities of high school years. He pays special attention to the school organizations to which he belonged, recalling the successes and failures of these clubs, and remembering the people who shared his interests and skills.

Advertisements placed by community businesses remind graduates of stores that they patronized and passed daily. The advertisements illustrate important elements of each student's school year.

Best of Luck

HOMEROOM 405

On April 22, 1969, Allderdice lost a devoted friend. Miss Zinn served as an office clerk under all of Allderdice's principals. She made many lasting friendships among the faculty and staff. And the student body loved her as a friend as well as a helpful secretary. Miss Zinn took great pride in TA's athletic and academic achievements. She also shared in our school's daily problems. For instance, not too long ago a large fight started in front of the senior office. When Miss Zinn noticed the trouble, she hurried without hesitation to solve the problem. She walked directly into the center of the fight and broke it up. Her understanding of the students enabled her to control this group because physically Miss Zinn certainly would not match the strength of the brawlers!

Miss Zinn also attended Allderdice proms each year. To Miss Zinn, Allderdice meant more than just a place to work. And she meant more than just an employee to everyone here. She contributed a great deal to Allderdice's development. We are all deeply grieved by her death.

Allderdice students mean more than just highschool kids to the Pittsburgh community. As consumers, they comprise one of the most influential elements considered by store owners, who order such items as clothing, books, magazines, and even foods such as pizza and popcorn with high school kids in mind.

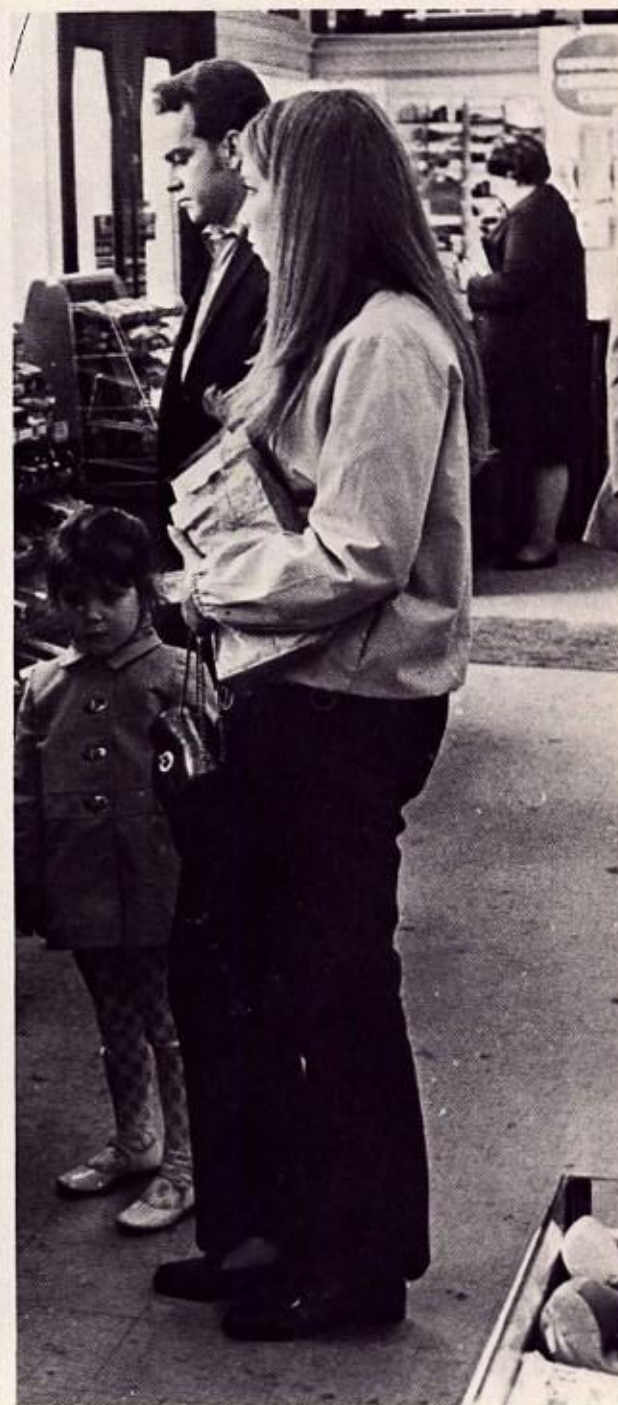

As employees, Allderdice students have become quite active, working as salesmen, check-out clerks, babysitters, and gas station attendants. They also serve as badly needed volunteers in hospitals, community centers, tutoring services, and religious institutions.

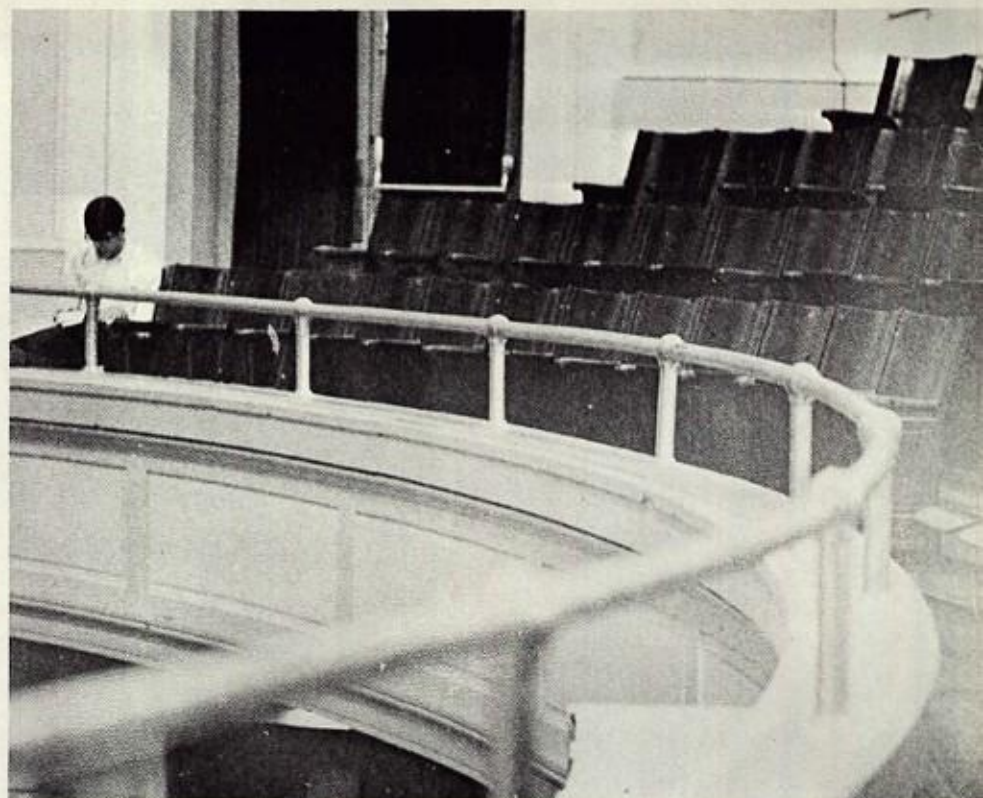

And, naturally, Allderdice students frequent many of Pittsburgh's pleasure spots: playgrounds, restaurants, movies, light shows, concerts, plays, and ball games.

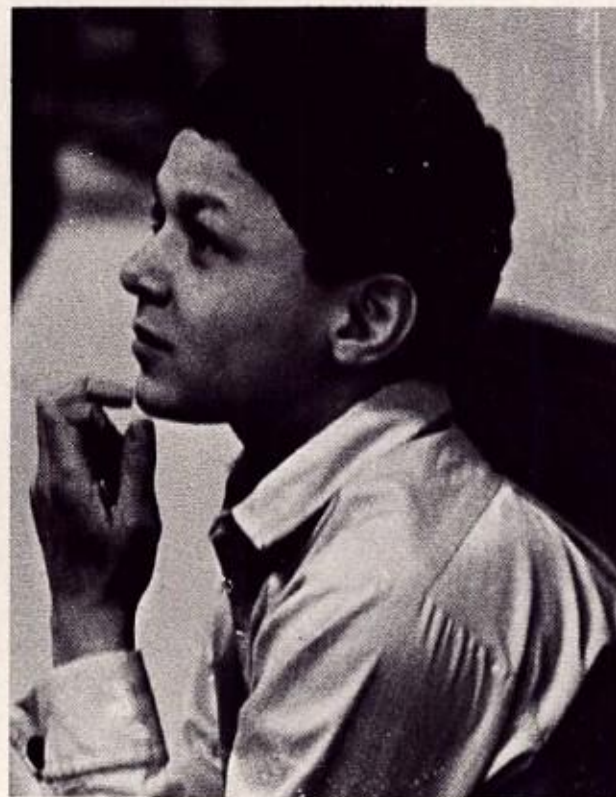

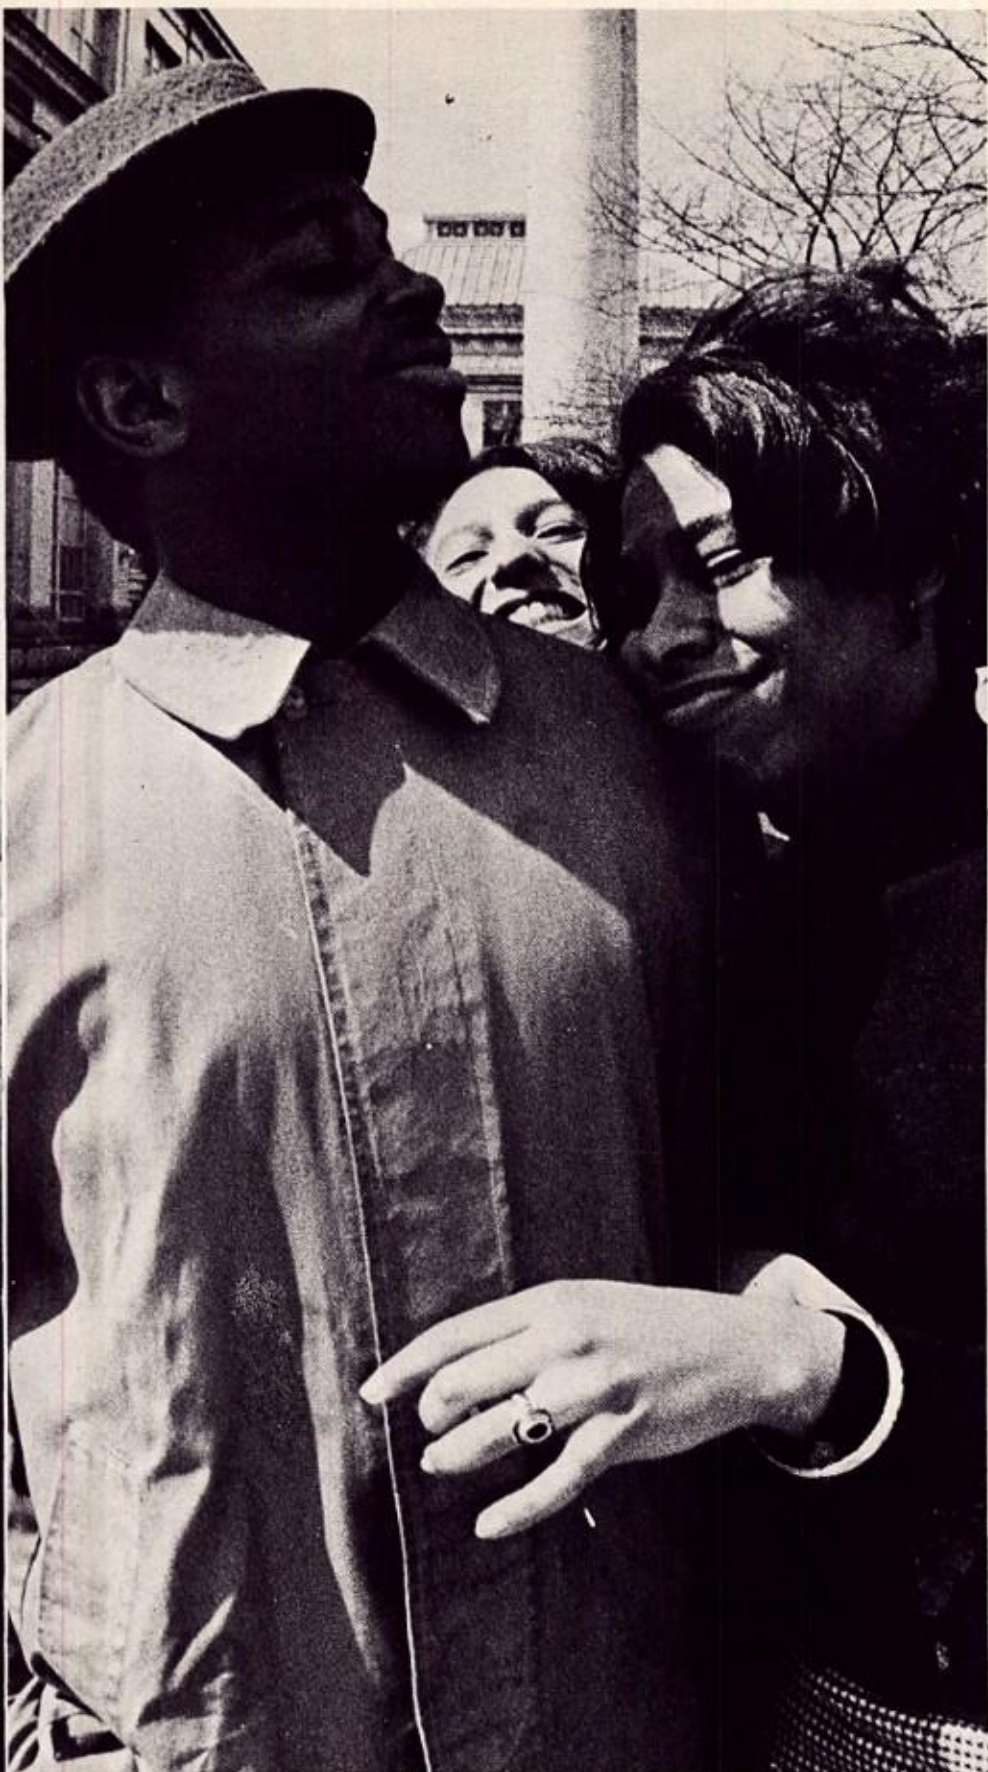

Allderdice students look at themselves as just kids going about their individual business; but members of the Pittsburgh community see them as a group of big spenders, hard workers, and pleasure seekers.

The collected images, the picture flashes in your mind of the last four years, are locked securely into place, just as one who collects butterflies closes his full drawer and an empty one.

Hours of study for tests that no
longer matter,
Efforts for now insignificant projects,
Worry for long-defunct relationships,
Laughs for what now seem humorless jests,
Tears for now childish traumas.
And waiting to release a rainstorm of ideas,
But ending up with only a spatter.

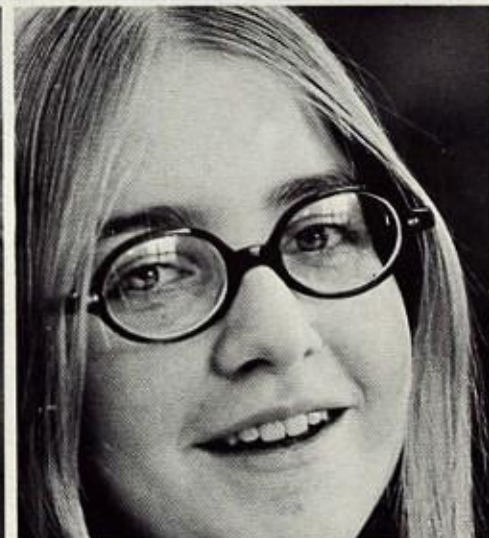

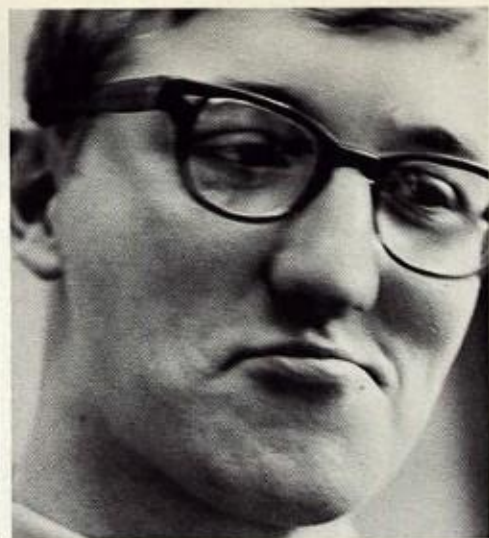

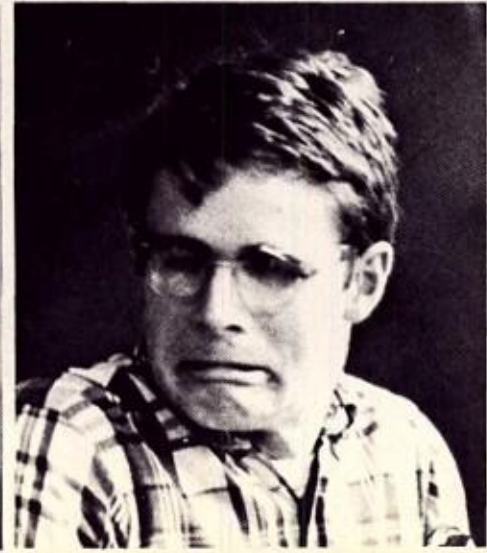

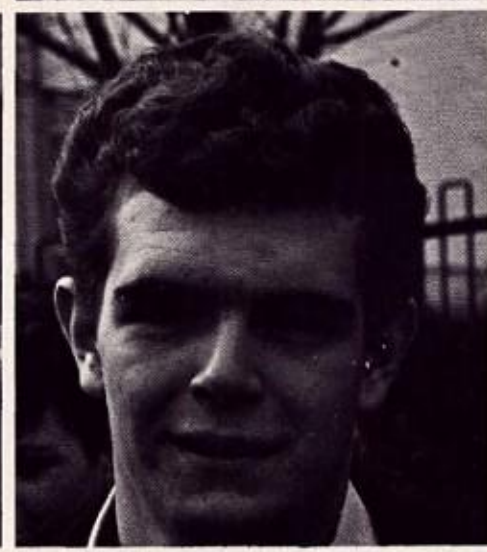

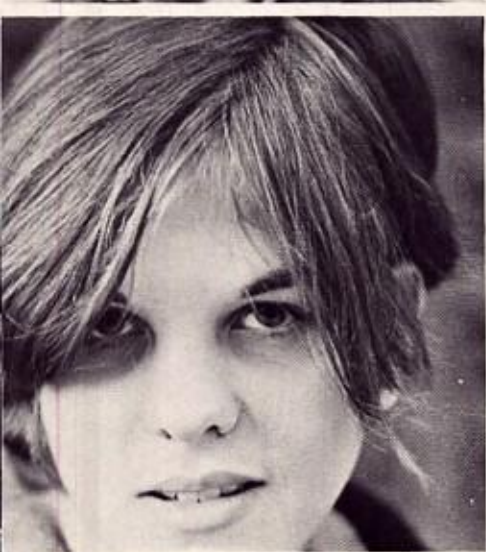

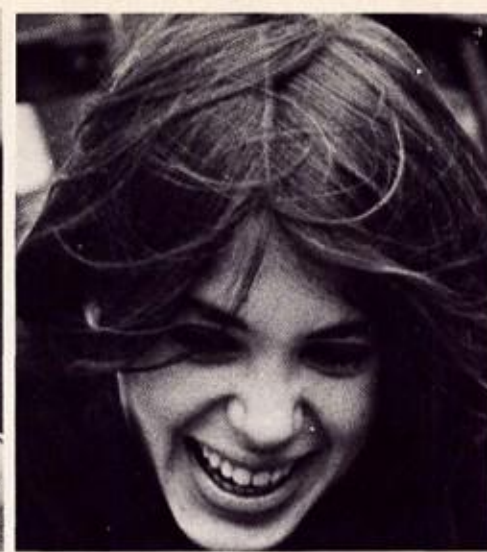

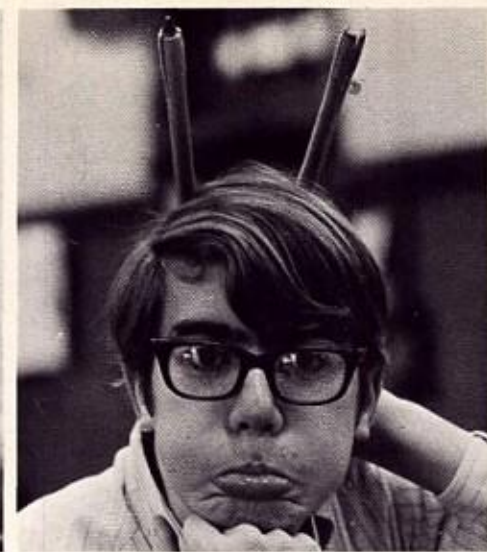

The pettiness, the wastes of time,
The boredom, the cloying routine of Alderdice are now behind you.
But behind you, too, are those exciting moments when a concept suddenly became clear, when your first date was arranged in study hall, when you first smiled at your future best friend. when you got elected as an officer of your club.
And behind you, too, are little things like just having a good day or getting an A on a difficult test or adding to the heap already piling up in your mind another idea of what you are.

With graduation from this school,
A mass of daytime hours
Now empty their twelve-year build-up
Of classes and Pavlov-like bells.
Hollow, the hours wait to be filled
By a new kind of Individual,
With no "Alderdice" now in front of
His title—Just a space
That he can fill in later to show
What kind of Individual he's decided
That he is.

Yesterday washes pale and drenched;
Tomorrow an eager-to-arrive day
Waits, empty of failure, bursting
With chance. It's the entrance
To the end of yesterday,
And the coming reflection
Of the progression of today.
